Separate Steel Talks Initiated; Results "Zero"

Fact-Finders Hold Hearing Today

WASHINGTON (AP)—A confusing welter of steel dispute negotiations in Washington and a score of other cities Sunday wound up with "zero" results, the federal mediation chief said.

Joseph F. Finnegan, the government mediator, met with the top negotiating teams of industry and the United Steelworkers of America for 70 minutes Sunday afternoon, after 11 separate company meetings here had broken up without visible progress.

President David J. McDonald of the Steelworkers, who had asked the company-by-company talks in evident hope of splitting some steel companies off from the industry-united position, told newsmen: "No progress was made at any of the company meetings reported to me."

"I think that statement stands for me too," said R. Conrad Cooper, chief negotiator for the industry.

Monday, President Eisenhower's board of inquiry headed by Dr. George W. Taylor, re-enters the dispute. It will hold a public hearing at 2 p.m. after separate sessions with the union at 10 a.m. and the industry negotiator at 11 a.m.

But faces were grim Sunday and comments bitter as the two sides prepared to let the Taft-Hartley Act national emergency procedure run its course.

That would mean a secret ballot by the 500,000 Steelworkers on the company's last offer, which is to be delivered to the presidential board formally Monday. It is the same offer which union spokesmen previously have declared unacceptable.

Finnegan, Cooper and McDonald presented themselves to newsmen after the top bargaining teams finished their session in a downtown hotel.

"What if anything was accomplished today?" a reporter asked.

"Zero," said Finnegan unsmilingly.

"Would you care to elaborate?"

"Well, half of zero is still zero," said the government's chief mediator.

Both Cooper and McDonald said they knew of nothing the government could do at this time to prevent the dispute from going to a secret ballot Jan. 11-13.

If the last offer is rejected, the union is free to stage a resumption of the 166-day strike which virtually paralyzed the steel industry this fall and caused multi-billion-dollar losses in total national output.

The strike could be resumed after Jan. 26. That is when the 80-day back-to-work injunction issued under the Taft-Hartley law expires.

Balmy Georgia Weather Grooms Vacationing Ike

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — President Eisenhower flew down to Dixie Sunday for a work and rest vacation at Augusta National Golf Club. The weather was balmy and he was on the course 15 minutes after he arrived.

The work will be coming along later, in preparation for the return of Congress to Washington, Jan. 6, and later top-level diplomatic sessions.

Eisenhower will be conferring by telephone Monday morning with Secretary of State Christian A. Herter. White House press secretary James C. Hagerty said one thing they will discuss will be the letter the President received from Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev requesting a date other than April 27 for an East-West summit conference.

This, Hagerty said, also is a matter for discussion with U. S. allies.

The chief executive's smile was going full blast when he stepped off his plane from Washington and found the sun pouring down and the thermometer at 70.

"Well," he exclaimed delightedly, "this is better than last time."

Eisenhower spent 12 days here in November relaxing at his favorite golfing spot in advance of his arduous good-will trip to eleven nations.

Mrs. Eisenhower looked equally happy, even though she has no great hankering for flying.

Accompanying the Eisenhowers from Washington were Mr. and Mrs. George Allen and William E. Robinson. Robinson, of New York is chairman of the board of Coca Cola Corp. Like Allen, he is a favorite golf and bridge companion of the President.

Allen is a Washington businessman and a neighbor of the Eisenhowers in Gettysburg.

Eisenhower will be in Augusta at least through New Year's Day.

In the coming political campaign, Eisenhower will be expected to give whatever help he can to Republican hopes for victory in next fall's elections.

His first big 1960 chance will be as the star of a top-drawer list of speakers at 75 simultaneous "Dinner With Ike" meetings across the country on Jan. 27. These will kick off a GOP fund-raising drive.

The list of speaker assignments announced for the Jan. 27 dinners included:

Riverside, Calif., former Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin of Maryland; District of Columbia, Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller; Baltimore, Rep. Charles A. Halleck of Indiana.

Traffic Deaths Drop As Holiday Nears Windup

Motorists heading home at the end of the three-day Christmas holiday weekend ran afoul of hazardous driving conditions on many of the nation's jammed highways Sunday.

But due mainly to the strict enforcement of traffic regulations by state and local police working full shifts, the final death toll was not expected to reach the 530 traffic fatalities which the National Safety Council forecast for the 78-hour weekend. The period ran from 6 p.m. Thursday, local time, to midnight Sunday.

The council described the worsening weather conditions and the heavy traffic as a "lethal combination" and urged caution.

The traffic fatality rate also appeared to lag behind last year's pace. At the 72-hour mark, 402 traffic fatalities were counted compared to 417 for the same period during the 1958 four-day Christmas weekend.

Wintry weather — wind-driven snows and ice-glazed highways — made driving hazardous in Oklahoma, New Mexico, Texas and parts of Kansas, Iowa, Minnesota and the Dakotas. Freezing rain to heavy snow was expected to spread into the upper Mississippi Valley through the night.

A snowfall of 3 to 5 inches closed U.S. 64 between Boise City, Okla., and Clayton, N.M. Driving was discouraged in the Oklahoma Panhandle.

In Wisconsin, extreme caution was urged on the state's fog-shrouded, wet highways.

Tolls were high in New York where heavy travel encountered weather hazards, and in California where it didn't.

The accumulation of traffic deaths outstripped that considered usual for a nonholiday weekend period of 78 hours at this season. Such a figure, the safety council, said was 370.

Firemen Win 3-Hour Battle To Save Port

Tugboat Explodes, Burns Alongside Loaded Gas Barge

CRESCENT CITY, Calif. (AP)—A tugboat exploded in port Sunday alongside a barge loaded with 800,000 gallons of high octane gasoline. A three-hour battle by fire fighters saved this northern California lumber and fishing port from disaster.

A Coast Guard cutter finally got a grappling hook aboard the sinking tugboat and towed it out to sea.

A deckhand, Gordon McCallen, 23, of Seattle, was believed either to have burned to death in the tugboat or to have been blown to his death in the harbor waters.

His post was right over the central force of the first explosion. He remained unaccounted for after the tugboat sank, 150 yards outside the harbor.

One man was hospitalized with face burns.

Part of Town Evacuated

The downtown district of Crescent City, a town of 2,750, was hastily evacuated.

Flash fires had to be put out aboard the highly volatile barge. Other small fires broke out on the docks, set by the intense heat of flames from the tugboat 100 yards off shore.

A Coast Guard vessel pumped water on the flaming tugboat while 40 firemen—the entire Crescent City department and volunteers of the Crescent City Fire Protection District — fought the shore-side fires.

When the tugboat was brought under tow, it had burned to the water line.

The evacuation order was canceled as the tug was towed away. The intense heat had melted the radar antenna and all metal parts of the tug's superstructure. Both its engines blew up.

Blast Felt Miles Away

The hospitalized crewman was clambering out of the engine room when the first explosion occurred shortly after 9 a.m.

A pipe supplying fresh air to the tugboat sucked in some gasoline from the barge and vapors in the engine room blew up both engines.

"The first big one shook the town," said Capt. Victor Stone of the Crescent City Fire Protection District.

"Firemen responding to the call felt the blast two and three miles away."

"The whole harbor was evacuated. We got as many men on fishing boats as we could and moved them out to sea."

Sniper Slaying Story Doubted

PAINESVILLE, Ohio (AP)—Police trying to solve the sniper slaying of Charles R. Clark on Christmas Eve were uncertain Sunday that a truck driver in love with Clark's wife told the truth when he admitted firing the fatal bullet.

Floyd E. (Gene) Hargrove, 34, the truck driver, was arrested three hours after Clark, 35-year-old Boy Scout leader and Sunday school superintendent was killed by a single bullet in the temple.

At first, Hargrove denied the shooting. Then, late Saturday, after day-long interrogation by Sheriff William B. Evans of Lake County and others, he was quoted by them as admitting: "I did it."

The truck driver and Clark's wife, Lois, 30, a beautiful brunette former model and mother of four, have said they carried on a secret eight-month affair, Evans said.

The story Hargrove told Saturday to Evans, Mentor Police Chief Frank D. Hathy and Asst. Lake County Prosecutor John F. Clair Jr. was summarized by Evans as follows:

Hargrove parked his car a block from the Clark home in Mentor, walked to the Clark's backyard, carrying a loaded .22-caliber rifle, and fired from close range when he saw Clark framed in the kitchen window.

He then ran back to his car, drove to a 40-foot embankment along Lake Erie's shore and hurled the rifle into the water.

For more than six hours Sunday a team of seven skin-divers tried in vain to find the rifle.

Agenda Shapes Up As Summit Parley Hurdle

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet press hinted Sunday Premier Nikita Khrushchev will insist on talking about his total disarmament plan at the East-West summit meeting.

While the Soviet Union has agreed with the United States, Britain and France on a summit meeting in Paris next year at a date to be decided, the big hurdle is expected to be an agenda.

The tenor of the Soviet press indicates some tough bargaining lies ahead on an agenda. Khrushchev's total disarmament plan has been labeled propaganda by spokesmen for the West, which prefers to take up his ideas at a 10-nation disarmament conference to be held in Geneva.

The Communist party newspaper Pravda derided the idea of a summit meeting of mere talk "while the further arms race continues." It said this idea of a talk-fest was being hinted at in the Western press.

And in what might be a reference to a Soviet insistence on taking up at the summit the plan Khrushchev laid before the United Nations last September, Pravda said disarmament is a top subject and only statesmen invested with full powers can decide world problems.

The trade union newspaper Trud said, "Disarmament is the key to easing international tensions." It noted that three months had gone by since Khrushchev unfolded his plan at the U.N. for total disarmament within four years. It is not the fault of the Soviet Union, Trud added, that nothing had been done about it.

Pravda said recognition by the Western powers of the need for summit meetings "is noted with satisfaction by all peace-loving men and women."

The newspaper said Western press hints of summit talks without reaching practical solutions of world problems were attempts "to shake the public hopes for the forthcoming meeting to make an effective contribution to the consolidation of peace."

Rockefeller Action Surprises Kennedy

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.) says he was "really surprised" at the announcement that New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller had quit the Republican presidential nomination race.

Kennedy and his wife were at a dinner party Saturday night in the luxurious Roundhill Hotel when the senator heard the news.

"I am really surprised," Kennedy said. "I heard something about it earlier but couldn't believe it."

Kennedy reiterated he will not announce his own intentions concerning the presidential contest until after New Year's when he returns to Washington. He and his family are here for the holidays.

Three Injured As Earth Slide Derails Train

SEATTLE (UPI) — An earth slide Sunday derailed nine cars of the Great Northern Railway's crack passenger train, the Empire Builder, on the outskirts of Seattle and three crew members were injured.

Two units of the four-unit diesel engine were knocked into the waters of Puget Sound from the tracks which skirt the water's edge.

No passengers suffered serious injuries, a Great Northern dispatcher said.

The accident occurred about 8 p.m. e.s.t. shortly after the 13-car train had pulled out of the station here en route to Chicago. The train was filled with holiday travelers.

$125,000 Fire Levels Washington Co. Barn

SHARPSBURG, Md. (AP)—Fire destroyed one of the largest barns in Washington County Sunday. Firemen estimated the loss at $125,000.

Volunteer firemen from Shepherdstown, W. Va., and Sharpsburg, Boonsboro and Fairplay, Md., battled the blaze for 11 hours. Sharpsburg Fire Chief Warren Davis estimated 125 men with six pieces of equipment were on the job at the height of the fire.

The stone and frame barn owned by Richard Smith was on land 1½ miles east of Sharpsburg where part of the Battle of Antietam was fought during the Civil War.

The roof of the 135-by-70-foot barn already had caved in when the first firemen arrived about 10 a.m. The last of them didn't leave until 9 p.m. A house 150 feet away and some outbuildings were saved.

Severe Winter Storm Sweeps Into Midwest

By The Associated Press
A severe winter storm with heavy snows and high winds swept across the thousands of square miles from Kansas north through the Dakotas and northeast into the Upper Mississippi Valley Sunday.

The Weather Bureau warned that blizzard conditions were developing from eastern Nebraska and northwest Iowa through the eastern Dakotas and western Minnesota.

Parts of Kansas reported a 7-inch snow with the fall continuing.

The Oklahoma Panhandle had 3 to 5 inches on the ground.

Gusts up to 50 miles an hour blew the heavy, white blanket out of New Mexico, reducing visibility to near zero. Travelers were ward from the Gulf of Mexico.

Speculation Over Running Mate Mounts

Rocky's Withdrawal Leaves V. President Alone In GOP Field

By ERNEST B. VACCARO
WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon—the Republican presidential nomination virtually in his grasp—stood aloof Sunday from mounting speculation over his likely running mate.

The obviously happy Nixon appeared aware, as most leaders of both parties professed to be, that only a major unforeseeable obstacle could upset his chances now that his chief potential rival has withdrawn from the race.

New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's sudden and surprise announcement that he will not run left Nixon alone in the field. And there appeared slim likelihood that anyone else might step in where a campaigner like Rockefeller declined to tread.

While others speculated on a GOP vice-presidential nominee and began thinking in terms of booms for their favorites, Nixon refused to be drawn into making a choice.

He told reporters as he left his Wesley Heights home for a football game that it is too early for him to discuss a running mate or, for that matter, to make any announcement on his own behalf for the presidency.

With everything going his way, the vice president appeared to feel there is nothing to gain by speeding up an announcement of his own candidacy for top place on the ticket.

Plans "Always Been Made"

"My plans have always been made," he said in reply to questions, "independently of what other people might say or do."

Would Rockefeller's decision to withdraw speed up his announcement, reporters wanted to know.

"It doesn't change my plans as far as an announcement is concerned," he replied.

His chat with newsmen took place as Nixon entered his limousine for a trip to Baltimore to attend the professional football game between the Baltimore Colts and the New York Giants. With him was Atty. Gen. William P. Rogers, his close friend and adviser. Also in the party were Nixon's 14-year-old nephew, Donnie Nixon of Whittier, Calif., and Rogers' sons, Tony, Jeff and Doug.

As vice-presidential speculation ranged over such prospects as Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell, House GOP Leader Charles A. Halleck of Indiana and Sen. Kenneth B. Keating of New York, pressure was growing to persuade Rockefeller to take second place on the ticket.

Keating himself said he hoped Rockefeller would reconsider his position not to be a candidate for vice president, although he added, "but he has said to me privately as well as publicly he would not run for vice president."

Dems United Against Nixon

The Democrats, with a flock of potential candidates maneuvering for the top nomination on their ticket, found themselves united in a beat-Nixon theme.

Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, the Democratic vice presidential nominee in 1956, said Rockefeller's withdrawal "shows old guard Republicans are in complete control."

Interviewed on a CBS-TV program—"Face the Nation"—Kefauver predicted the Democrats will be more united against Nixon than they would have been against Rockefeller, who he said, is more liberal.

Nixon, Kefauver said, has voiced some "harsh words" against Democrats in past campaigns and he said they "haven't forgotten."

Kefauver observed that President Eisenhower's 11-country trip abroad on a peace crusade had captured popular imagination and (Continued on Page 2, Col. 4)

Southern Iraq Reported Ripe For Rebellion

TEHRAN, Iran (AP)—A wave of grave unrest and opposition to the regime of Premier Abdel Karim Kassem is sweeping farmers and tribesmen of southern Iraq, according to reports received here Sunday from points along the Iranian-Iraqi frontier.

One said the opposition is verging on open revolt, with tribesmen helping to arm other civilians for an eventual uprising.

These reports were attributed to tradesmen and merchants who crossed the border from Basra, in Iraq, to buy Iranian farm produce for sale in Iraqi markets.

One merchant said there had been a demonstration against Kassem in the Iraqi village of Amarah, where, he said, anti-Kassem leaflets were distributed.

There were new reports of Iraqi troop movements just west of the frontier above Khorramshahr. Some of this information came from tradesmen who crossed the frontier, some of it from Iranian sentries equipped with long-range binoculars.

All this raised a question of whether Kassem was not more concerned with his own position than with any possible move against Iran in the Shatt al Arab frontier dispute. This might explain recent Iraqi troop concentrations — assuming the reports to be true — along the frontier above Basra.

According to this theory, Kassem may be massing troops to crush any possible uprising while stationing strong contingents along the border to seal off avenues of escape.

Iraqi detachments were noticed at Shier, a village just across the frontier from the Iranian village of Fakkeh.

The twin villages of Shalamachen — one in Iraq and the other in Iran — became armed camps with the arrival of an Iraqi contingent on one side and Iranians on the other.

"My plans have always been made," he said in reply to questions, "independently of what other people might say or do."

Would Rockefeller's decision to withdraw speed up his announcement, reporters wanted to know. "It doesn't change my plans as far as an announcement is concerned," he replied.

His chat with newsmen took place as Nixon entered his limousine for a trip to Baltimore to attend the professional football game between the Baltimore Colts and the New York Giants. With him was Atty. Gen. William P. Rogers, his close friend and adviser. Also in the party were Nixon's 14-year-old nephew, Donnie Nixon of Whittier, Calif., and Rogers' sons, Tony, Jeff and Doug.

As vice-presidential speculation ranged over such prospects as Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell, House GOP Leader Charles A. Halleck of Indiana and Sen. Kenneth B. Keating of New York, pressure was growing to persuade Rockefeller to take second place on the ticket.

Keating himself said he hoped Rockefeller would reconsider his position not to be a candidate for vice president, although he added, "but he has said to me privately as well as publicly he would not run for vice president."

Dems United Against Nixon

The Democrats, with a flock of potential candidates maneuvering for the top nomination on their ticket, found themselves united in a beat-Nixon theme.

Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, the Democratic vice presidential nominee in 1956, said Rockefeller's withdrawal "shows old guard Republicans are in complete control."

Interviewed on a CBS-TV program—"Face the Nation"—Kefauver predicted the Democrats will be more united against Nixon than they would have been against Rockefeller, who, he said, is more liberal.

Nixon, Kefauver said, has voiced some "harsh words" against Democrats in past campaigns and he said they "haven't forgotten."

Kefauver observed that President Eisenhower's 11-country trip abroad on a peace crusade had captured popular imagination and (Continued on Page 2, Col. 4)

Traffic Deaths Drop As Holiday Nears Windup

Traffic	434
Fires	39
Miscellaneous	65
Total	538

Motorists heading home at the end of the three-day Christmas holiday weekend ran afoul of hazardous driving conditions on many of the nation's jammed highways Sunday.

But due mainly to the strict enforcement of traffic regulations by state and local police working full shifts, the final death toll was not expected to reach the 530 traffic deaths which the National Safety Council forecast for the 78-hour weekend. The period ran from 6 p.m. Thursday, local time, to midnight Sunday.

The council described the worsening weather conditions and the heavy traffic as a "lethal combination" and urged caution.

The traffic fatality rate also appeared to lag behind last year's pace. At the 72-hour mark, 402 traffic fatalities were counted compared to 417 for the same period during the 1958 four-day Christmas weekend.

Wintry weather — wind-driven snows and ice-glazed highways — made driving hazardous in Oklahoma, New Mexico, Texas and parts of Kansas, Iowa, Minnesota and the Dakotas. Freezing rain to heavy snow was expected to spread into the upper Mississippi Valley through the night.

A snowfall of 3 to 5 inches closed U.S. 64 between Boise City, Okla., and Clayton, N.M. Driving was discouraged in the Oklahoma Panhandle.

In Wisconsin, extreme caution was urged on the state's fog-shrouded, wet highways.

Tolls were high in New York where heavy travel encountered weather hazards, and in California where it didn't.

The accumulation of traffic deaths outstripped that considered usual for a nonholiday weekend period of 78 hours at this season. Such a figure, the safety council, said was 370.

Maryland GOP, Demo Leaders Agree Rockefeller Withdrawal Is For Best

By The Associated Press

Rockefeller would be beatable by Democrats and Republicans in Maryland both agree that New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's decision to withdraw as a potential candidate for the Republican presidential nomination is for the best.

The move was described by Republican State Chairman D. El. could have happened for the Red-dred Rinehart as "good news."

"This confirms my thinking of the last three months," he said, Keldin, in San Francisco for a "that Nixon should be accorded speaking engagement, agreed with the privilege of running for pre-Rockefeller that GOP leaders oppose a contest for the nomination."

Democratic State Chairman Thomas B. Finan said, "I'm glad to carry the party banner," Mc-to hear it. I feel either Nixon or Keldin added.

Ickes' Daughter Wed To Iranian In Moslem Rite

By MARTHA COLE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Facing a mirror, symbol of future bright-ness, Elizabeth Ickes, 18, was married Sunday in a Moslem ceremony to Djahangir Boushehri, son of a prominent Iranian family.

The pretty brunette daughter of the late Harold L. Ickes, secretary of interior under Presidents Roosevelt and Truman, 1933-46, went through two ceremonies—the first simple Episcopal rites at her family home in Olney, Md., 20 miles away.

Less than two hours later, before a score of witnesses at the Iranian Embassy here, the bride and groom sat in straight chairs facing a mirror in a silver frame on the floor.

Mother Fatally Stabs Two Of Her Sleeping Children

YORK, Pa. (UPI) — A mother of four fatally stabbed two of her children with a kitchen paring knife as they slept in their beds early Sunday, police said.

Mrs. Pauline E. Ampsacher, 39, of 1321 W. College Ave., in West Manchester Twp., was held without bail on murder charges after the tragedy was discovered by the children's father, Sylvester, 62.

Trooper Leon D. Leiter of the York state police barracks said the nine-month-old Jackie Edward and Joan Marie, 6, were stabbed several times. The two other children, Grover Henry, 5, and Dale Eugene, were unharmed.

Police said the only explanation Mrs. Ampsacher gave them for the stabbings was "the devil told me to do it."

Holiday Traffic Accidents Kill 10 In Maryland

By The Associated Press

Four persons met violent death on Maryland streets and highways Sunday, boosting the Christmas weekend toll to 10.

The latest deaths included an Eastern Shore youth, an Alabama soldier, an elderly Baltimore pedestrian and an Anne Arundel County man. They brought the state's traffic toll for the year to 516 compared with 495 at this time last year.

Two other persons died in fires during the holiday weekend.

Specialist 4-C. Paul Clifton Griffin, 20, of Gadsden, Ala., was killed early Sunday when the car he was driving crashed into a bridge abutment at Snowdens Creek on Maryland 26 two miles east of Eldersburg.

Michael Lynch, 17, of Ocean City died Sunday in Peninsula General Hospital, Salisbury, of injuries received in a two-car accident on U. S. 50 half a mile west of the Ocean City Bridge on Christmas Day.

Lynch's 14-year-old brother, David, was pronounced dead at the time of the accident. Police said the older brother was the driver of the sports car in which they were riding.

Their car was struck in the rear by another auto driven by 44-year-old Wilmer Smith of Berlin, police said. Smith suffered minor injuries.

Herbert E. McCauley, 30, of Glen Burnie died Sunday afternoon at St. Agnes Hospital after the car he was driving struck a utility pole on Wilkens avenue in Baltimore. There were no other passengers.

Conrad Schaefer, 84, of Baltimore was pronounced dead at St. Joseph Hospital Sunday shortly after he was struck by a car on Patterson Park avenue in northwest Baltimore.

U.S. Pilot On Trial For Life

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP)—Allen Lawrence Pope, a Miami, Fla., pilot who flew combat missions in the Korean War, goes on trial for his life Sunday on a charge of piloting a bomber for Indonesian rebels in the outer island uprising of 1958.

An air force court will hear the case against the 31-year-old American. He is the first American ever to face a possible death sentence under the Indonesian law in this neutralist nation's turbulent history.

Pope was shot down in a rebel Indonesian B26 over the Banda Sea May 18, 1958.

The Indonesian state of siege law was changed in 1951 to provide the death penalty for bearing arms against the state.

Pope's wife and two children are in Florida. He was married before and his ex-wife with one child are in Texas.

The Indonesian army said Pope was responsible for most of the rebel air raids on ships, ports and airfields in eastern Indonesia during the rebellion led by dissident army elements in Sumatra and the Celebes.

Md. Highway Traffic Up 10% Over 1958

BALTIMORE (AP) — More cars than ever traveled Maryland highways this year, a report by the State Roads Commission shows. Traffic was up 10 per cent over last year and 75 per cent above figures of 10 years ago.

Commission Chairman John B. Funk called his traffic division's report "startling." He said more than ever the state needs a continuous network of major highways — that the new figures serve only to emphasize the need.

The commission has said an overhaul of the current 12-year program will be proposed to the General Assembly in February. Main highway programs are held up under current law until secondary road improvements are completed in each county.

Fire Safety Drive Urged By Gov. Tawes

NEWARK, Md. (AP) — Gov. Tawes Sunday urged that more emphasis be placed on fire safety, especially during the winter season.

The governor spoke at the dedication of a new fire hall here.

"Traffic safety," Tawes noted in his prepared remarks, "is promoted by many great agencies. But you people in the fire service stand virtually alone in spearheading the effort to reduce the tragic loss of life and property by fire."

Tawes said he would not minimize the importance of traffic safety but added that "fire safety as a matter of public concern should be brought to a level with traffic safety, with perhaps more emphasis on both."

He said Maryland has a good fire safety record "but it is not good enough."

Forest lands make up approximately 45 per cent of Kentucky's land area.

Md. Population Gain 8th Biggest In Nation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maryland's population gain of 29.4 per cent since 1950 was the eighth biggest increase among the 50 states of the union.

Figures published by the Census Bureau during the weekend estimated Maryland's population on July 1, 1959 as 3,031,000 as compared to 2,343,001 in the 1950 census.

The bureau estimated the total population on July 1 as 177,021,000 and said next year's census probably will show a total of about 180 million. The figure in 1950 was 150,697,361.

Nevada showed the greatest population growth between the 1950 census and mid-1959 as its population expanded by 74.9 per cent. The national average increase was 17 per cent.

Maryland's neighbor, Delaware, jumped 42.7 per cent to rank fifth among the states showing increases. Virginia was up 20.3 per cent and the District of Columbia 4.7, while West Virginia's population decreased 2 per cent.

Speculation

would add strength to the GOP cause.

Sources close to Nixon said he would be in no hurry to talk out on major issues for the time being as long as he is benefitting from his association with Eisenhower.

Besides, he was said to feel that it would not be in his own or the party's interest to start campaigning early in the year with developments at home and abroad moving so rapidly.

Adlai Stevenson, the Democratic standard-bearer in 1952 and 1956 and still the choice of many in his party for another try in 1960, gave voice to the theme that party campaigners are expected to hit hard next fall.

Rockefeller's withdrawal, Stevenson said, "leaves his party no free choice of candidates for president."

Rinehart took note of Rockefeller's statement that he would not be available for the vice presidential nomination next year.

"I would not hazard a guess as to who should be on the ticket with Nixon," Rinehart said.

Finan mentioned Sens. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts, Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, Stuart Symington of Missouri and former Gov. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois as potential Democratic candidates who he feels could beat Nixon more easily than the New York governor.

Kennedy is the only one of these Democrats who has shown interest in running in Maryland's presidential preference primary May 17. The winner legally is entitled to Maryland's 24 votes on at least the first ballot at the national convention next summer.

However, Gov. Tawes has indicated he would prefer having the state delegation go to the convention uncommitted. But Tawes said he would not oppose any bid by Kennedy in the primary.

In front of the mirror was a silver casket of sweets to show that life should be sweet, two white candles in silver candlesticks symbolizing light and happiness, a vase of white chrysanthemums and a copy of the holy Koran.

Moslem Hossein Touty spoke to them in English, admonishing that, "Both of you must decide to be self-sacrificing, one to each other." Twice he asked them if they were prepared to be so, and twice they answered, "Yes."

Then Touty asked the groom to kiss the bride's hand and she, "as a token of harmony," to kiss his face. And they did so.

After words from Touty in Arabic of the Koran, both the bride and the groom signed documents of marriage. In them the groom promised to pay the bride, anytime she demanded, about 18 ounces of real gold. It's a traditional part of the ceremony, but the amounts may vary, Touty explained later.

Secrets Of Charm

by John Robert Powers

Toes up today — higher than your head — keeps you on your toes tonight!

Elevate Before You Celebrate

The year is near, time to ring out the old, ring in the new... but not for you if you're all wrong out.

So stop the clock for a few precious minutes today... and make time to relax and rest. Recall the mad pace of this merry month, reflect on how late you'll be up that New Year's eve.

If you're giving a New Year's Eve party, no party preparation is more important than preparing the hostess. It you're going to a party, remember it's the best of the year, when you feel her gayest.

Stop everything, drop everything! If you can, stretch out in a warm tub of water, then into bed for a nap.

Or you certainly can spare 15 or 30 minutes to take a comfortable prone position with your feet propped high, the kind of elevation for good circulation.

To make the most of this quiet retreat, untangle tense muscles immediately by stretching out as far as you can from tip to toe. Make a conscious effort to take deep breaths, slowly and rhythmically. Shut your eyes... in fact, lock them with eye-freshening moisture pads.

If you are a woman who simply MUST work to feel she isn't wasting time, then let something work FOR you while you rest. A facial mask will ease your conscience and your complexion, all at once. If you have none handy, there's no need to shop.

Instead, try one of these home facials (and let them set while you do likewise). Separate an egg, apply yolk and white alternately. Or moisten oatmeal slightly and spread it on. Even plain buttermilk or a thick coat of vanishing cream will provide a quick pick-up.

Judicious temperance in the matter of tiredness and tension—

A One-Day Treatment for Despair

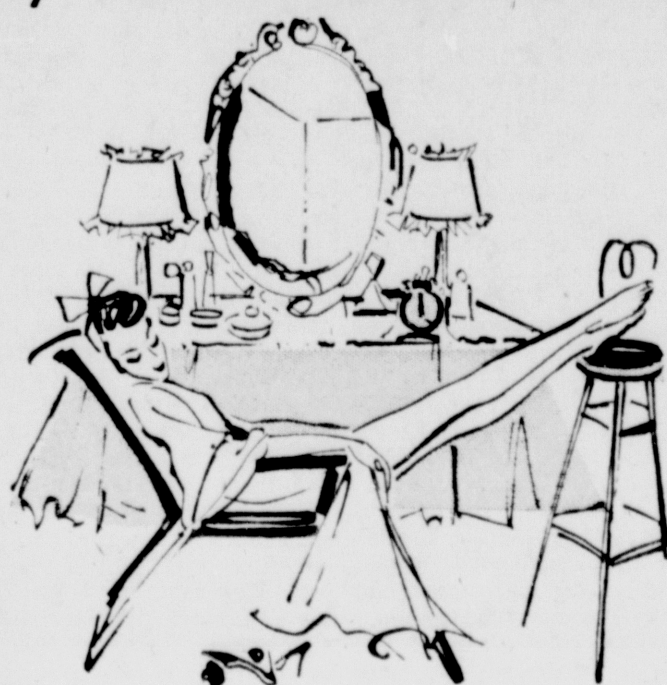

"Can you help me?" he asked the doctor. "I just seem to have come to a dead end." And the doctor, who was not a psychiatrist, then wrote 4 of the most remarkable prescriptions for one day's living you've ever read... Whatever trouble you're facing, this advice may work for you! Find out in January Reader's Digest.

Secrets Of Charm

by John Robert Powers

Toes up today — higher than your head — keeps you on your toes tonight!

Elevate Before You Celebrate

The year is near, time to ring out the old, ring in the new... but not for you if you're all wrong out.

Stop the clock for a few precious minutes today... and make time to relax and rest. Recall the mad pace of this merry month, reflect on how late you'll be up that New Year's eve.

If you're giving a New Year's Eve party, no party preparation is more important than preparing the hostess. If you're going to a party, remember it's the best guest who feels her gayer.

Stop everything, drop everything! If you can, stretch out in a warm tub of water, then into bed for a nap.

Or you certainly can spare 15 or 30 minutes to take a comfortable prone position with your feet propped high, the kind of elevation for good circulation.

To make the most of this quiet retreat, untangle tense muscles immediately by stretching out as far as you can from tip to toe. Make a conscious effort to take deep breaths, slowly and rhythmically. Shut your eyes... in fact, lock them with eye-freshening moisture pads.

If you are a woman who simply MUST work to feel she isn't wasting time, then let something work FOR you while you rest. A facial mask will ease your conscience and your complexion, all at once. If you have none handy, there's no need to shop.

Instead, try one of these home facials (and let them set while you do likewise). Separate an egg, apply yolk and white alternately. Or moisten oatmeal slightly and spread it on. Even plain buttermilk or a thick coat of vanishing cream will provide a quick pickup.

Judicious temperance in the matter of tiredness and tension—

Coren On Bridge

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1—Partner opens with two no trump and you hold:
 ♠ A K Q 8 7 4 3 ♦ K Q 3 2 ♣ 5
 What is your response?
 A.—The only information you require is the number of aces in partner's hand. The recommended bid therefore is an immediate response of four clubs, the bid a grand slam in hearts. If he bids four no trump, showing three aces, you will settle for a small slam.

Q. 2—As South you hold:
 ♠ A 10 4 ♥ J 10 7 ♦ K 8 2 ♣ A J 9 5
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass
 2 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Partner has insisted upon a game contract despite the warning that you might have a very weak hand with no particular fit. Actually you have a near maximum holding on which a one no trump response may be made, to wit, nine points with a few trimmings in the way of tens. To show that you had a glamorous raise it is necessary to bid one more heart than is necessary. The suggested call is therefore five hearts, which would surely be safe. Certainly partner cannot expect more than this, else you would have made a more constructive response.

Q. 3—As South you hold:
 ♠ K J 9 ♥ K Q 7 ♦ A Q 6 2 ♣ 7 6
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass
 2 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Having reached the conclusion that there is no possible game in the hand, whether partner can be trusted with a one no trump contract. In these columns the chivalrous attitude is favored, and a pass is indicated. Partner's known maximum is 10 points which together with your 15 does not add up to the required 26.

Q. 4—As South you hold:
 ♠ J 7 5 4 2 ♥ 6 3 ♦ K Q 6 4 2 ♣ 5
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♠ Double East 1 ♠
 Pass 1 NT Pass ?
 A.—Despite the fact that you have only six points in high cards this is a good hand facing a partner who is strong enough to double and then bid no trump. The recommended bid is therefore an immediate response of four clubs, the bid a grand slam in hearts. If he bids four no trump, showing three aces, you will settle for a small slam.

Q. 5—Partner opens with two hearts and you hold:
 ♠ A K J 9 2 ♥ A 7 ♦ K Q J 4 ♣ K 6
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass
 2 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—You should not be satisfied with anything less than game, but you should make every effort to insure reaching game in the best contract. This can be done by a forcing rebid of three diamonds. Such a rebid will allow partner to show a preference. If partner does not care for spades he will no doubt bid three no trump, which you are obliged to pass.

Q. 6—As South you hold:
 ♠ A K 9 6 ♥ K Q 9 5 3 ♦ A 10 2 ♣ 9 3
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ 2 ♠ 2 ♠ 2 ♠
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Your partner has forced you to reveal at the level of three and therefore, have a very strong hand. The suggested bid is three spades rather than a rebid of your own suit. Free bids by responders in suits higher in rank than the opener's suit are very drastic acts and should consequently be accorded great respect.

Q. 8—Partner opens with one spade and you hold:
 ♠ A K J 10 2 ♥ 6 3 2 ♦ 7 5 3 ♣ A Q 2
 What is your response?
 A.—This hand is not as good as it looks at first blush. While it has 10 high card points it is not rich in playing strength, and the suggested response is two spades.

Q. 9—Partner opens with two hearts and you hold:
 ♠ A K J 9 2 ♥ A 7 ♦ K Q J 4 ♣ K 6
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East

140 Receive Yule Baskets In Tri-Towns

Toys, Foodstuff
Are Distributed

WESTERNPORT — One hundred and forty Christmas baskets to the needy were distributed by the United Organizations in the Tri-Towns area on Christmas Eve.

In addition to foodstuff many of the baskets contained toys for the children. They were donated by: members of the Franklin Mission, Boy and Girl Scouts of the Tri-Towns, Tri-Towns Kindergarten, the Westernport Church of the Brethren, and Tri-Hi-Y Club of Bruce High School.

Taking gifts to the boys' forestry camp near New Germany were Mr. and Mrs. William Brown, Fred Warnick, Mrs. Zena Hartman, Miss Ann Shirley Hartman, Harry J. Biggs, Paul Rexrode and Miss Faith Grindle.

The group joined the boys in a turkey dinner by invitation and joined a church group from Bittinger to give the boys a special Christmas. Several of the boys sang songs. One of the gifts given to both camps in Garrett County was a record player.

Attending the boys camp at Lonaconing were Miss Effie Fordyce, James Coleman, Charles McCarty, Leo Howard and Rev. Levi J. Ziegler, pastor of the Westernport Church of the Brethren. They were warmly received. Carols and popular songs were sung. Games were played. Other gifts received by the boys were from groups of churches in Baltimore.

Director of the Lonaconing Camp, Ralph Swauger and Assistant director of the New Germany Camp, William Fauth, extended an invitation for all to visit their camps and view the type of program that is set up and what the camps are accomplishing.

David Curran, field supervisor of the three forestry camps in this area, stated that he is available to give a program of interpretation consisting of slides and talks.

Church School Teachers Meet

LONA CONING — St. Peter's Church school teachers held a meeting on Sunday after the 10 a.m. service to plan for the church school projects.

A Christmas party was held on Sunday at 3 p.m. by the Youth Group of St. Peter's church.

A Christmas program was presented by the Church School yesterday at 7 p.m. at the Episcopal Church.

The entrance of the church has Christmas greens and colored lights for the Yuletide season. The interior of the church is decorated also.

Nasser Is Elected Water Commissioner

WESTERNPORT — Albert Nasser, native of here, was recently elected to the office of water commissioner of the South Farmingdale, N.Y. Water District for a three-year term.

Over the past six years Nasser has participated in the careful and adequate planning carried out by the Board of Water Commissioners of the district. He won re-election by a vote of 1,059 to 289 for his opponent.

He has resided in that city for 22 years and has been program supervisor at Grumman Aircraft Engineering Corporation almost four years after having been a foreman 12 years. Louis Nasser, Waverly Street, is a brother.

Christmas Birthdays

Mrs. Joseph P. Spiker, Railroad Street, Midland, is shown with three of her children who observed their birthday along with the Christmas celebration. Janet Lee, standing in the foreground, was two years old on Christmas day. The twins, being held by their mother, were one year old. Joan Kay was born on Christmas Eve 1938 and June Ray was born 18 hours later on Christmas day. Mr. and Mrs. Spiker have two other children. They are Joey, aged three, and James, who was born prematurely the day after Thanksgiving and is still being kept in an incubator at Miners Hospital in Frostburg. He is progressing well and his parents expect to bring him home early. In 1960, Mr. Spiker is employed as an order cutter by the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company. Mrs. Lillian Gray, Dan's Rock Road, is the maternal grandmother. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Spiker, Railroad Street, are the paternal grandparents.

So. Branch River Span Collapses

MOOREFIELD, W. Va. — A 140-foot long steel span of a bridge carrying the Moorefield-Fisher road across the South Fork of the South Branch River is resting in the icy waters of the Potomac River tributary as a result of a freak accident.

The mishap occurred early Friday when a car operated by a Grant County youth smashed into the main batter post, causing the span to collapse and fall about 40 feet into the water.

The driver, Clyde Ours, 21, of Cabins, and his brother, Ocie Ours, 30, also of Cabins, literally rode their car down as the steel girders plunged into the South Fork.

The 1955 auto, damaged beyond repair, ended up on its nose. The two men received only minor contusions and bruises and were treated and released at Grant County Memorial Hospital, Petersburg.

Only the bridge flooring saved their car and them from being washed downstream.

The bank end of the east span of the three-span bridge is down, but the other end is still attached to the pier in the river.

Each of the three spans is 140 feet long, according to William B. Rannels, Romney, district engineer for the West Virginia State Roads Department.

The structure is known as the Buzzard Fork Bridge.

The road, Secondary West Virginia 220/3 which leads to Fisher, is being detoured south on Route 220 to Petersburg Gap Bridge, and then back north on Secondary Route 10.

Rannels said preliminary inspection indicates that the damage might be about $30,000 if the long span can be salvaged.

However, if it cannot be used again, the cost will be considerably more than that, he added.

Closed Three to Four Months
At any rate, the bridge will be closed for three to four months, Rannels announced. The three-span steel structure with steel concrete and asphalt flooring was given a complete overhaul two years ago. It is 16 feet wide.

The final decision on the future of the bridge will be up to the commission's bridge division.

State Trooper Jack Baker of the Moorefield Detachment of State Police said the driver has been charged with reckless driving.

Third Escapee Is Recaptured In West Virginia

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va. (AP) — A state trooper Sunday captured the last one of three prisoners who broke out of the Jefferson County Jail.

The other two inmates were recaptured within a few hours after the trio escaped Saturday afternoon.

Trooper Edward Stout of the Martinsburg barracks said he captured Albert John Killmet, 29, of Elizabeth, N. J., on a railroad track near Inwood, about 12 miles west of here.

Stout said a woman who operates a grocery store on U. S. 11 near Inwood notified authorities after seeing Killmet walking down the road. Stout found the fugitive running down the tracks a few minutes later and picked him up.

The other two prisoners, Matthew Harrison Hardy, 25, of Harper's Ferry and John Jenkins, 18, of Summit Point, were picked up at Inwood Saturday night.

The three men escaped after prying bricks loose from their cell wall and removing a window.

Killmet had been charged with armed robbery, Hardy with auto and grand larceny and Jenkins with auto larceny. They were being held pending action of the grand jury, which convenes Jan. 19.

Former Local Woman Fatally Burned

A former local woman was fatally burned Christmas Day in a boarding house in Washington.

The victim was Mrs. Mary Evelyn Rutley, 49, and she died in the Washington Hospital Center in the District of Columbia of burns received in a blaze early Friday.

District Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said evidence indicated Mrs. Rutley set fire to her bed while smoking, but that investigation is continuing.

Damage to the room in the house at 3145 16th Street, N.W., was negligible, police reported.

Mrs. Rutley was born August 20, 1910, in Baltimore, and was a daughter of the late Alfred E. and Margaret (Spier) Upham.

She is survived by an aunt, Miss Anna D. Spier, Cumberland, and a sister, Mrs. Jean Howse, Providence, R. I.

Mrs. Rutley was a graduate of Allegheny High School, Class of 1927, and her mother was principal of West Side School for many years before her retirement.

Mrs. Rutley had been employed as a social worker by Children's Hospital, Washington.

The body will be brought to the George Funeral Home here.

Services will be conducted today at 2 p.m. at the funeral home by Rev. M. D. Robertson, pastor of First Presbyterian Church. Interment will be in Rose Hill Cemetery.

140 Receive Yule Baskets In Tri-Towns

Toys, Foodstuff Are Distributed

WESTERNPORT — One hundred and forty Christmas baskets to the needy were distributed by the United Organizations in the Tri-Towns area on Christmas Eve.

In addition to foodstuff many of the baskets contained toys for the children. They were donated by members of the Franklin Mission, Boy and Girl Scouts of the Tri-Towns, Tri-Towns Kindergarten, the Westernport Church of the Brethren, and Tri-Hi-Y Club of Bruce High School.

Taking gifts to the boy's forestry camp near New Germany were Mr. and Mrs. William Brown, Fred Warnick, Mrs. Zena Hartman, Miss Ann Shirley Hartman, Harry J. Biggs, Paul Rexrode and Miss Faith Grindle.

The group joined the boys in a turkey dinner by invitation and joined a church group from Bittinger to give the boys a special Christmas. Several of the boys sang songs. One of the gifts given to both camps in Garrett County was a record player.

Attending the boys camp at Lonaconing were Miss Effie Fordyce, James Coleman, Charles McCarty, Leo Howard and Rev. Levi J. Ziegler, pastor of the Westernport Church of the Brethren. They were warmly received. Carols and popular songs were sung. Games were played. Other gifts received by the boys were from groups of churches in Baltimore.

Director of the Lonaconing Camp, Ralph Swauger and Assistant Director of the New Germany Camp, William Fauth, extended an invitation for all to visit their camps and view the type of program that is set up and what the camps are accomplishing.

David Curran, field supervisor of the three forestry camps in this area, stated that he is available to give a program of interpretation consisting of slides and talks.

So. Branch River Span Collapses

MOOREFIELD, W. Va. — A 140-foot long steel span of a bridge carrying the Moorefield-Fisher road across the South Fork of the South Branch River is resting in the icy waters of the Potomac River tributary as a result of a freak accident.

The mishap occurred early Friday when a car operated by a Grant County youth smashed into the main batter post, causing the span to collapse and fall about 40 feet into the water.

The driver, Clyde Ours, 21, of Cabins, and his brother, Ocie Ours, 30, also of Cabins, literally rode their car down as the steel girders plunged into the South Fork.

The 1955 auto, damaged beyond repair, ended up on its nose. The two men received only minor contusions and bruises and were treated and released at Grant County Memorial Hospital, Petersburg.

Only the bridge flooring saved their car and them from being washed downstream.

The bank end of the east span of the three-span bridge is down, but the other end is still attached to the pier in the river.

Each of the three spans is 140 feet long, according to William B. Rannells, Romney, district engineer for the West Virginia State Roads Department.

The structure is known as the Buzzard Fork Bridge.

The road, Secondary West Virginia 220/3 which leads to Fisher, has been barricaded and traffic is being detoured south on Route 220 to Petersburg Gap Bridge, and then back north on Secondary Route 10.

Rannells said preliminary inspection indicates that the damage might be about $30,000 if the long span can be salvaged.

However, if it cannot be used again, the cost will be considerably more than that, he added.

Closed Three to Four Months
At any rate, the bridge will be closed for three to four months.

Rannells announced. The three-span steel structure with steel, concrete and asphalt flooring was given a complete overhaul two years ago. It is 16 feet wide.

The final decision on the future of the bridge will be up to the commission's bridge division.

State Trooper Jack Baker of the Moorefield Detachment of State Police said the driver has been charged with reckless driving.

Third Escapee Is Recaptured In West Virginia

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va. (AP) — A state trooper Sunday captured the last one of three prisoners who broke out of the Jefferson County Jail.

The other two inmates were recaptured within a few hours after the trio escaped Saturday afternoon.

Trooper Edward Stout of the Martinsburg barracks said he captured Albert John Killmet, 29, of Elizabeth, N. J., on a railroad track near Inwood, about 12 miles west of here.

Stout said a woman who operates a grocery store on U. S. 11 near Inwood notified authorities after seeing Killmet walking down the road. Stout found the fugitive running down the tracks a few minutes later and picked him up.

The other two prisoners, Matthew Harrison Hardy, 25, of Harper's Ferry and John Jenkins, 18, of Summit Point, were picked up at Inwood Saturday night.

The three men escaped after prying bricks loose from their cell wall and removing a window.

Killmet had been charged with armed robbery, Hardy with auto and grand larceny and Jenkins with auto larceny. They were being held pending action of the grand jury, which convenes Jan. 19.

Going Around In Traffic Circles

In Rome, Italy, the city council has begun consideration of ways of alleviating the acute downtown congestion of the ancient city, short of banning all but public transportation. That expanding population, increasing number of vehicles and ancient obstructions such as the Pantheon, the Forum and the Colosseum may make a vehicular ban necessary has been predicted by officials of the city, but they are making one last attempt to find a solution before accepting such drastic action as inevitable.

Like most cities which have fought a losing battle against too many vehicles in too small an area, Rome has tried all manner of traffic regulation, including no-parking edicts, one-way streets and underpasses at the worst intersections. All proved inadequate to cope with the increasing crush of traffic.

One councilman has come up with a plan which he touts as not only providing immediate relief but the long range answer as well. His plan is to replace the present transport mediums of trolleys, buses and trolley-buses with double deck buses. Thus, the number of vehicles needed to haul the same number of people, he figures, could be cut in half. This is good arithmetic but poor logic.

Rome's problem, like that of most cities, is keeping up with expanding populations, not merely coping with the traffic now using the streets. Double deck buses would cut in half the number of vehicles needed now, but it would be no more than a few years until increasing numbers of private vehicles and public riders took up the slack. The city would then be back where it is now.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

Corny?

Eddie Cantor, the comedian, has written a book that is not funny. The clown has often been a philosopher. So Eddie has written a serious book about his philosophy of life.

It just goes to show how little relationship there is between how a man earns a living and the real man. When Eddie was seen on stage, screen, or television, he was always the comedian, the clown, sometimes even a black-faced clown. But since his childhood, Eddie was always very serious. He had to be.

As one might say, he started life with nothing. Nowadays, he would be called underprivileged. He was very much so. He was an orphan in the days before relief. Somehow he managed to survive his childhood. Perhaps it was because he was taken to the Educational Alliance Camp on Surprise Lake where we saw grass and trees and horses and cows and found life very different from the East Side of New York City where we all lived.

Unfortunately for the social workers, we did not know that we were underprivileged. Imagine how sad it would have been had we discovered such a condition. We took life as it came and thanked God that it was no worse. So now Eddie has written a philosophy of life which he calls, "The Way I See It." And in it I find some paragraphs on what the youngsters call "corny":

"If you advertised for a mother . . . do you know how the ad would read? 'Wanted: a woman to cook and sew, to clean house, wash clothes, and do all the odd jobs in between. Must be at home with illness, adversity and crisis of every kind. No salary . . . no vacation . . . no chance for advancement.' Now you know that nobody would ever answer an ad like that. That's why God invented mothers.

"I suppose this would be considered 'corn'—another of the dirty words. If so, it's a compliment when they call me corny. Corn is a lot more wholesome, more satisfying, than some of the stuff they're serving up today."

Well, these days, the young folks like to be sophisticated, to show that nothing bothers them. But if that is so, why do they cry in the movies where nobody can catch them at it but their consciences? If that is so, why do they like the sentimental pictures on the late shows on television? This younger generation of sophisticates which talks so much on the telephone and has read all the "bad" books and has seen all the pictures that the Legion of Decency marks as improper is just as sentimental as we were, only it doesn't like to show it. We were not ashamed to show that we loved home and mother.

As Eddie says:
"But exactly what do they mean by being corny? That you love your mother? That you love America? At the end of a radio show, I once said, 'Tomorrow is Flag Day. We're urged by veterans' groups and patriotic associations to hang out our flag. That's fitting and proper. But why just tomorrow? Why not every day? Let's give our flag a permanent wave.' "Loving your country . . . this is corny?"

The point of Eddie's book is that life can be good and useful and successful if one lives it decently and with dignity. Eddie worked at being a clown but he did not clown up his life. He remained married to his one wife and he made Ida a good husband. His girls are not to be ashamed of. So, is this Hollywood?

It is for Eddie. He did not have to dirty his life or his home or his family to get a little more publicity. He did not have to fake being a Left-Wing intellectual. Sure! Eddie knows that Karl Marx is not one of the Marx brothers. He knows that because he knows the Marx brothers and their mamma, too.

Instead, he has devoted much of his money to making it less unpleasant for boys and girls who have a tough childhood. He supports the old Camp on Surprise Lake where we used to sing around the campfire.

If you like that kind of a book, warm, cheerful, thoughtful, inspiring, read Eddie Cantor's "The Way I See It." If you find it "corny"—well, it's just too bad for you. You were born too late.

'This Stop Lever Is Stuck!'

What, If Anything, Did Big Show Accomplish?

PARIS

By Joseph Alsop

At the end of the big show here in Paris one point, at least, seems clear. The Western alliance very badly needs to find a better way of doing business.

Uncounted man hours of work by the most highly placed personages were consumed in the preparation for the grandiose gathering of the leaders of the United States, Britain, France, and Germany. Days on end were spent arranging the mere time-tables of their meetings together, their meetings alone with one another, and their luncheons and their dinners. Now they have met, and what has emerged from all this mountainous labor? Nothing, is the answer, except an agreement about future summit meetings with Nikita S. Khrushchev, which could quite easily have been negotiated by any four reasonably intelligent junior officials of the State Department and the French, British, and German foreign offices.

Long before the President and the others converged on Paris, it was known that the Western governments wanted the first summit meeting to take place on April 26 or April 27. It was also known that the British favored a whole series of summit meetings, on the ground that not much could be accomplished at a single hurried gathering of Chiefs of State. It was further known that the Germans and French did not want to go to the summit for the sole acknowledged purpose of talking about Berlin.

These facts were all clear in advance of the great rally here, and are now clearly registered in the rally's results. If there was to be any summit meeting at all, the British argument for a whole series of meetings is really unanswerable. That permitted a rotating scheme to be adopted, with Paris as the proposed site of the first meeting, to please Gen. de Gaulle. The American Soviet experts pointed out that it would be fatal to begin bargaining about Berlin where the Foreign Ministers left off at Geneva, and then to go on to further concessions. Thus the French and Germans got their way on the right approach to the Berlin problem. And that was that.

The resulting accord on the obvious and the inevitable was the only accord reached, however. Gen. de Gaulle's attitude is causing the gravest and most far-reaching problems for NATO, the main machinery of Western defense. The French President is also boiling with resentment at what he strangely imagines is a deep laid American plot to expel French influence from Africa. He and President Eisenhower gave a total of exactly fifty-five minutes to the effort to overcome these difficulties, talking through

Inside Washington

By Henry Cathcart

ANTARCTICA — Western nation diplomats in Washington believe the signing of the international treaty for demilitarization of Antarctica to be the brightest ray in current East-West negotiations. It is also the official view of the United States. President Eisenhower, for example, commented, "The Antarctic treaty and the guarantees it embodies constitute a significant advance toward the goal of a peaceful world with justice."

The treaty provides for long-term peaceful uses of Antarctica, a continent as big as North America and Europe combined, with unlimited inspection by any signatory nation of another's ships, bases and installations.

This is the first time that Russia has agreed to an inspection system anywhere in the world. Western diplomats believe it may be the opening wedge to acceptances of inspection systems elsewhere as the Antarctic pact proves its practicability.

Yet, there are signs that the treaty will not face easy going when it comes up for the necessary ratification in the Senate. Some students of political developments surrounding the frozen continent contend the United States gave away too much in achieving its program for demilitarization with inspection.

Both congressmen and senators are included in a group which holds that this country has perfectly valid claims on most of the continent which would be upheld in any international court. They also contend that Russia was so agreeable because she knew she had no such valid claim, and agreed to an inspection system in an area where she could not legally have set up military or missile bases anyway.

NEIL McELROY — The departure of Neil McElroy as secretary of Defense after some 26 months on the job came quietly and with an amazing lack of the usual run of comments about the government losing a dedicated and able public servant.

McElroy's resignation had been anticipated for months. In fact, he had been all set to depart earlier in the year but was persuaded to continue in his post during several crises now vague and faded.

The sorry fact is that McElroy was miscast in his role as the top man in the U.S. defense effort. He was more a salesman than an administrator. And, prior to his arrival on the Washington scene, his knowledge of national defense needs was unimpressive.

Yet, during his initial period as head man at the Pentagon, his stock soared. He was mentioned frequently as a vice presidential, and even a presidential possibility. In truth, no man in the Defense post could have made it a springboard for high political office.

McElroy's term in office opened with the sensational announcement of Russia's first successful sputnik, and the equally sensational failures of the American vanguard satellite program. In his two years in office, the Russians have widened their missile and space exploration by three to five years.

The former soap company head was also cast in the unhappy role of having to hold down defense budgets in tough, knock-down sessions with the service chiefs and the Democratic controlled Congress.

All-in-all, it was an unhappy time for the Defense department and for whomever had the misfortune to head it at the time.

Junketing Congressmen's Criticism Of Filipinos Often Is Unwarranted

By Drew Pearson

MANILA, P. I. — The Filipinos are our best friends in the Far East and we can be proud of the democracy we have helped them build. But we seem to have an irresistible proclivity for kicking our best friends in the seat of the pants.

This is especially true of Congressmen. They no sooner get off their free government plane and check into their hotel, usually paid for by the government, but they issue statements calculated to undercut the American-Philippine alliance.

The tactics of some "ugly" American personnel in shutting themselves up in exclusive groups along Dewey Boulevard or in military reservations has the same effect.

The Filipinos however are patient people. Despite the Congressmen and the "ugly Americans" the alliance is still strong. The Filipinos were taught for years to buy American products and they still do. They were taught to speak English and they are now the third-largest English-speaking country in the world—next after the United Kingdom—with six English-language newspapers, only two in Tagalog and two in Spanish.

The Philippines also have a literacy rate surpassed only by Japan and Taiwan, with a craving for education that sends colleges and night schools sprouting all over Manila. Within a few blocks of ancient university of Santo Tomas, founded in 1611, I saw the more recent East Asian college, the Guzman School of Technology, The Filipino School of Fashion, Far Eastern University, the University of the East, the Polytechnic Institute of the Philippines, and the Far Eastern Technical Institute.

English is the language of instruction in all of them, which caused the correspondent of Moscow's Izestia, while touring the islands, to urge the Filipinos to give up English and go back to their "beautiful Tagalog native language."

Moscow's Best Allies

Izestia's best allies in trying to alienate Filipino affection recently have been Congressman Phil Weaver, Nebraska Republican, and Sen. Steve Young, Ohio Democrat. The former demanded that American bases be moved to Thailand because of "thievery, looting, blackmail, extortion and assault" of American personnel — "all winked at or openly approved by perhaps the most corrupt government in the world."

Senator Young in turn announced that he had been forced to pay $25 for a room at the Manila Hotel and warned American tourists to stay away from the Philippines.

I told Filipino newsmen who queried me that Senator Young had had a fine record in Congress and doubtless had been suffering from a touch of the usual bug that hits Congressmen in the Philippines—"headlitis." The Senator from Ohio had checked into the hotel on November 13 with Sens. Frank Moss of Utah and Howard Cannon of Nevada, both Democrats, on an alleged trip of reserve officers. With them were 16 Senate functionaries supposedly putting in their reserve training by a pleasant tour of the Far East at Uncle Sam's expense.

Senator Young occupied Room 550 and his bill, No. 4436, showed that he paid not $25 for his room, but 25 pesos, which is about $12. However, the hotel manager told me that when the Senator paid his bill he wanted to exchange his dollars for pesos at the black market rate which would have made his room about $6. Black marketing is a criminal offense and the hotel manager refused.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Macmillan remains as ready as ever to make considerable concessions, in order to get a new deal on Berlin. Chancellor Adenauer remains as convinced as ever that the concessions already offered at Geneva went dangerously too far. Gen. de Gaulle agrees with Chancellor Adenauer. But while taking the firmest imaginary line on the Berlin crisis, with all its inherent dangers, de Gaulle is also firm in offering the Kremlin the tempting spectacle of disarray and disunity in the defenses of the West.

The final American view about the Berlin problem has not been revealed, perhaps because the American policy-makers have not yet reached a final view. Certainly they have not yet reached a final view about disarmament, which is being restudied for the umpteenth time by a new Presidential named committee, headed by Charles A. Coolidge. The Coolidge Committee has been talking about a kind of controlled military thin-out in Central Europe, "to test Soviet good faith." The British, the original sponsors of thin-out, have been veering away from it. The French want to begin with the heart of the problem, by controlling the vehicles designed to hurl nuclear weapons halfway around the world.

In other words the Western leaders have agreed when to have a meeting and where to have a meeting with Khrushchev. But they have failed to agree on what they themselves ought to say and do at this meeting which is now only a few months ahead. That certainly leaves an immense amount of hard work yet to be done.

(Copyright, 1959, New York Herald Tribune, Inc.)

So the Senator then warned tourists not to come to Manila. When I told Filipinos that Senator Young has had a good record, they expressed the hope that he would get over his touch of "headlitis" soon.

Theft And Poverty

Up at Clark Field, Chief U. S. Air Base in the Philippines, I found there had been theft from both the government and American personnel. But you have to remember that for some years we encouraged the Filipinos to steal from Japanese bases, so stealing from military bases to some has become an accepted profession. On the other hand there have been 27 Filipinos shot and killed by U.S. guards during this series of looting, which has made the local population just about as indignant as Congressman Weaver. Because Philippine law does not sanction the killing of a thief.

You also have to remember that when you put wealth alongside of extreme poverty you are bound to have trouble. One shelf of goods in the Clark Field PX would feed a neighboring Filipino family for months. Poverty is such that Filipinos dig foxholes on the Crow Valley bombing range to get scraps of shells after they explode. One man was killed and another had a leg blasted off waiting for the bombs to drop. Yet they sell the scrap for only 37 cents.

When the Filipino who had lost his leg was asked why he had hid on the bombing range at the risk of death for only 37 cents, he replied: "It's better than starving."

Shortly before I visited Clark Field, however, all thievery had stopped. The Philippine government had sent extra members of the Philippine Constabulary plus 12 horses to patrol the 27 miles of fence around Clark Field. This was partly necessary because budget cuts in Washington had eliminated 300 American guards this year.

Despite past theft and some friction, however, American military relations with the Filipinos on the whole are excellent. For the Philippine people have a genuine, deep-rooted affection for Americans which not even visiting Congressmen so far have been able to squelch. (Copyright, 1959, By The Bell Syndicate)

Jim Bishop: Reporter

By Jim Bishop

The Social Register, as an instrument of class, declined and fell into a coma some years ago. It is still alive, and I am certain that people thrill when they are listed in the little Blue Book, but it is no longer an instrument of power in the Snob Set. It has been years since I heard a long-neglected mother wail: "But Penelope, you cannot have this man to dinner—he's just a dirty little multi-millionaire."

There is no true blue-blooded society in America today, a society in which blood lines determine whether one is a thoroughbred or a plow horse. Nothing has taken the place of the Blue Book although, about fifteen years ago, Isabel Leighton, editor of The Aspin Age and author of other books, suggested a Society of Achievement.

Her idea was to dump all the blue-bloods and to draw up a social register in each large city in which achievement would be recognized. This book would list men like Dr. Jonas Salk and Richard Nixon and the top corporation officers and scientists and inventors and grocers, plus women like Pearl Buck and Oveta Culp Hobby and Irene Dunne and Ivy Baker Priest and Edna Ferber and Clare Boothe Luce.

It was such a sound notion that nothing came of it. The nearest thing to it—and it's pretty far behind Miss Leighton's idea—is a new book called Celebrity Register. It costs $26 a copy and if anyone thinks that I shelled out this money solely because my name is in it, he is eminently right.

The authors—Cleveland Amory, a writer with a name like a love-sick city, and Earl Blackwell, founder of Celebrity Service—did the work with Sydney Wolfe Cohen and a group of unemployed rewrite men. The book purports to list those persons who are international celebrities. This, as you might surmise, embraces the whole world.

Still, Celebrity Register lists fewer than 2,500 persons and I am sure that the number should be closer to 50,000, perhaps more. Who's Who in America lists more than 100,000 biographies of people from one country. These, of course, are not all celebrities, but, to even the score, many of those listed in the Celebrity Register would not be found in Who's Who.

The new book has an advantage in publishing pictures of those who have found favor with the authors in addition to a breezy little dissertation about each celebrity. Some of those "celebrities"—or perhaps, then celebrities—showed up at a cocktail party given for the authors at Sherman Billingsley's Stork Club.

Where else would one find Igor Cassini talking to Buddy Hackett about golf? Or Eddie Condon and Johnny Mercer asking each other how soon they could depart? Arlene Francis and Martin Gabel sat near the door. Lillian Gish and Mae Murray saw each other at a distance. There was a string ensemble and a stack of books on a table. It is hard to tell which made more noise.

After I got home, I sat looking over the entries in the Celebrity Register ($26) and I'm confused, Clara Bow? I'm her old number one fan but Miss Bow has been ill for many years and is not on the scene. Christine Jorgenson? Holy mackerel. Earl Long is listed, although I think that Lucky Luciano is better known internationally. Jackie Gleason is listed and I can understand this, even though the last time he went to Europe he found that he was unknown.

It is a pretty good sports compendium, loaded with fighters, golfers and tennis stars—plus Mickey Mantle and Al Lopez. I question whether these people are known in Iceland or Iran, or even in England. I can understand the inclusion of Anastas Mikoyan, number two man in the Kremlin, because he can induce shudders from Bayonne to Bombay, but why exclude his boss, Nikita Khrushchev?

Nikita is out and Toots Shor is in, and there is a bright line in that, but I will not write it. The dashing, devil-may-care attitude of the book is exemplified in the first entry—Hank Aaron, a ball player—and the last entry, Vera Zorina, a ballet star whose real name is Briggita Hartwig. Between those are 2,250 names. If all of them buy a copy, the gross will be $58,500. The book cost $125,000.

It's a great thing to have if one of the legs on the dining room table is short. (Copyright, 1959, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

A story from Israel concerns rationing that is necessary at times for bread, sugar, coffee and other essentials. Most persons take it in stride, but one fellow suddenly went berserk: "I've been standing in lines now for three weeks," he cried. "Butcher lines, Baker lines, Milkman lines. Everywhere lines. I'm going to complain to the prime minister." He strode off in a rage, but was back a couple of hours later. "Well," said a friend, "did you see the prime minister?" "Oy," was the answer, "there's really a line!"

Winter's Icy Weather Brings 'Fall' Season

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

Every large northern city has its F (fracture) day. It usually occurs when a combination of weather conditions leaves icy streets, slippery sidewalks, and snowpacked stairs. So many bones are broken that the emergency departments in many hospitals have a waiting line.

Falls are the leading cause of injury, next to motor vehicle accidents. Most of them could be avoided if snow and slush were removed from the outside stairs and from the sidewalks before it is trampled down and frozen into an uneven, slippery mass of ice.

When this occurs the ice is difficult to remove but covering it with gravel, cinders, sand, ashes, or rock salt makes it less hazardous.

Ice covered stairs are not fit for man or beast. This is likely to follow a temperature drop after a thaw, especially when water leaks from a faulty gutter. Many persons have been injured critically when leaving the house and stepping off onto a sheet of ice. Look first and then hold onto a rail.

It is unfortunate that shoes do not come equipped with chains but a deeply grooved sole and heel offer considerable protection. Many rubbers and overshoes are made in this way and a special cleat-like device is available to slip over the shoes.

When streets and sidewalks are slippery, walk at a cautious pace, with the legs separated to distribute the weight. Only the agile escape injury after the legs shoot out and the fall is inevitable. Some persons are able to roll over in midair like a cat and land on all fours. Others have the presence of mind to relax and slump to the ground, with the weight divided between hips and shoulders. The chance of injury is minimized in a forward fall by curling up and rolling as though doing a somersault.

The elderly and the disabled never should venture out when there is ice or snow on the ground. It is not worth the risk of a fractured hip, leg, wrist or arm.

TOMORROW: Don't neglect bleeding.

ARM VEIN INFLAMMATION
P. R. writes: Is it possible to develop phlebitis in an arm?

REPLY
Yes, but inflammation of the veins of the arms is less common than of the veins of the legs.

NO-COFFEE HEADACHE
H. T. K. writes: I want to give up coffee but develop a severe headache when I don't have it in the morning.

REPLY
If you have a good reason for giving up coffee stop drinking it and the headaches will disappear in time.

To the limit of space questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Persons' replies will be made when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Telephone queries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

Going Around In Traffic Circles

In Rome, Italy, the city council has begun consideration of ways of alleviating the acute downtown congestion of the ancient city, short of banning all but public transportation. That expanding population, increasing number of vehicles and ancient obstructions such as the Pantheon, the Forum and the Colosseum may make a vehicular ban necessary has been predicted by officials of the city, but they are making one last attempt to find a solution before accepting such drastic action as inevitable.

Like most cities which have fought a losing battle against too many vehicles in too small an area, Rome has tried all manner of traffic regulation, including no-parking edicts, one-way streets and underpasses at the worst intersections. All proved inadequate to cope with the increasing crush of traffic.

One councilman has come up with a plan which he touts as not only providing immediate relief but the long range answer as well. His plan is to replace the present transport mediums of trolleys, buses and trolley-buses with double deck buses. Thus, the number of vehicles needed to haul the same number of people, he figures, could be cut in half. This is good arithmetic but poor logic.

Rome's problem, like that of most cities, is keeping up with expanding populations, not merely coping with the traffic now using the streets. Double deck buses would cut in half the number of vehicles needed now, but it would be no more than a few years until increasing numbers of private vehicles and public riders took up the slack. The city would then be back where it is now.

Corny?

Eddie Cantor, the comedian, has written a book that is not funny. The clown has often been a philosopher. So Eddie has written a serious book about his philosophy of life.

It just goes to show how little relationship there is between how a man earns a living and the real man. When Eddie was seen on stage, screen, or television, he was always the comedian, the clown, sometimes even a black-faced clown. But since his childhood, Eddie was always very serious. He had to be.

As one might say, he started life with nothing. Nowadays, he would be called underprivileged. He was very much so. He was an orphan in the days before relief. Somehow he managed to survive his childhood. Perhaps it was because he was taken to the Educational Alliance Camp on Surprise Lake where we saw grass and trees and horses and cows and found life very different from the East Side of New York City where we all lived.

Unfortunately for the social workers, we did not know that we were underprivileged. We imagined how sad it would have been had we discovered such a condition. We took life as it came and thanked God that it was no worse. So now Eddie has written a philosophy of life which he calls, "The Way I See It." And in it I find some paragraphs on what the youngsters call "corny":

"If you advertised for a mother . . . do you know how the ad would read? 'Wanted: a woman to cook and sew, to clean house, wash clothes, and do all the odd jobs in between. Must be at home with illness, adversity and crisis of every kind. No salary . . . no vacation . . . no chance for advancement.' Now you know that nobody would ever answer an ad like that. That's why God invented mothers."

"I suppose this would be considered 'corn'—another of the dirty words. If so, it's a compliment when they call my corny. Corn is a lot more wholesome, more satisfying, than some of the stuff they're serving up today."

Well, these days, the young folks like to be sophisticated, to show that nothing bothers them. But if that is so, why do they cry in the movies where nobody can catch them at it but their consciences? If that is so, why do they like the sentimental pictures on the late shows on television? This younger generation of sophisticates which talks so much on the telephone and has read all the "bad" books and has seen all the pictures that the Legion of Decency marks as improper is just as sentimental as we were, only it doesn't like to show it. We were not ashamed to show that we loved home and mother.

As Eddie says:
"But exactly what do they mean by being corny? That you love your mother? That you love America? At the end of a radio show, I once said, 'Tomorrow is Flag Day. We're urged by veterans' groups and patriotic associations to hang out our flag. That's fitting and proper. But why just tomorrow? Why not every day? Let's give our flag a permanent wave.' 'Loving your country . . . this is corny?'"

The point of Eddie's book is that life can be good and useful and successful if one lives it decently and with dignity. Eddie worked at being a clown but he did not clown up his life. He remained married to his one wife and he made Ida a good husband. His girls are not to be ashamed of. So, is this Hollywood?

It is for Eddie. He did not have to dirty his life or his home or his family to get a little more publicity. He did not have to take being a Left-Wing intellectual. Sure! Eddie knows that Karl Marx is not one of the Marx brothers. He knows that because he knows the Marx brothers and their mamma, too.

Instead, he has devoted much of his money to making it less unpleasant for boys and girls who have a tough childhood. He supports the old Camp on Surprise Lake where we used to sing around the campfire.

If you like that kind of a book, warm, cheerful, thoughtful, inspiring, read Eddie Cantor's "The Way I See It." If you find it "corny"—well, it's just too bad for you. You were born too late.

'This Stop Lever Is Stuck!'

What, If Anything, Did Big Show Accomplish?

By Joseph Alsop

PARIS

At the end of the big show here in Paris one point, at least, seems clear. The Western alliance very badly needs to find a better way of doing business.

Uncounted man hours of work by the most highly placed personages were consumed in the preparation for the grandiose gathering of the leaders of the United States, Britain, France, and Germany. Days on end were spent arranging the mere timetable of their meetings together, their meetings alone with one another, and their luncheons and their dinners. Now they have met, and what has emerged from all this mountainous labor? Nothing, is the answer, except an agreement about future summit meetings with Nikita S. Khrushchev, which could quite easily have been negotiated by any four reasonably intelligent junior officials of the State Department and the French, British, and German foreign offices.

Long before the President and the others converged on Paris, it was known that the Western governments wanted the first summit meeting to take place on April 26 or April 27. It was also known that the British favored a whole series of summit meetings, on the ground that not much could be accomplished at a single hurried gathering of Chiefs of State. It was further known that the Germans and French did not want to go to the summit for the sole acknowledged purpose of talking about Berlin.

These facts were all clear in advance of the great rally here, and are now clearly registered in the rally's results. If there was to be any summit meeting at all, the British argument for a whole series of meetings is really unanswerable. That permitted a rotating scheme to be adopted, with Paris as the proposed site of the first meeting, to please Gen. de Gaulle. The American Soviet experts pointed out that it would be fatal to begin bargaining about Berlin where the Foreign Ministers left off at Geneva, and then to go on to further concessions. Thus the French and Germans got their way on the right approach to the Berlin problem. And that was that.

The resulting accord on the obvious and the inevitable was the only accord reached, however. Gen. de Gaulle's attitude is causing the gravest and most far-reaching problems for NATO, the main machinery of Western defense. The French President is also boiling with resentment at what he strangely imagines is a deep laid American plot to exploit French influence from Africa. He and President Eisenhower gave a total of exactly fifty-five minutes to the effort to overcome these difficulties, talking through

Inside Washington

ANTARCTICA — Western nation diplomats in Washington believe the signing of the international treaty for demilitarization of Antarctica to be the brightest ray in current East-West negotiations.

It is also the official view of the United States. President Eisenhower, for example, commented, "The Antarctic treaty and the guarantee it embodies constitute a significant advance toward the goal of a peaceful world with justice."

The treaty provides for long-term peaceful uses of Antarctica, a continent as big as North America and Europe combined, with unlimited inspection by any signatory nation of another's ships, bases and installations.

This is the first time that Russia has agreed to an inspection system anywhere in the world. Western diplomats believe it may be the opening wedge to acceptance of inspection systems elsewhere as the Antarctic pact proves its practicability.

Yet, there are signs that the treaty will not face easy going when it comes up for the necessary ratification in the Senate. Some students of political developments surrounding the frozen continent gave away too much in achieving its program for demilitarization with inspection.

Both congressmen and senators are included in a group which holds that this country has perfectly valid claims on most of the continent which would be upheld in any international court. They also contend that Russia was so agreeable because she knew she had no such valid claim, and agreed to an inspection system in an area where she could not legally have set up military or missile bases anyway.

The former soap company head was also cast in the unhappy role of having to tough down defense budgets in hold, knock-down sessions with the service chiefs and the Democratic-controlled Congress.

All-in-all, it was an unhappy time for the Defense department and for whomsoever had the misfortune to head it at the time.

Junketing Congressmen's Criticism Of Filipinos Often Is Unwarranted

By Drew Pearson

MANILA, P. I. — The Filipinos are our best friends in the Far East and we can be proud of the democracy we have helped them build. But we seem to have an irresistible proclivity for kicking our best friends in the seat of the pants.

This is especially true of Congressmen. They no sooner get off their free government plane and check into their hotel, usually paid for by the government, but they issue statements calculated to undercut the American-Philippine alliance.

The tactics of some "ugly" American personnel in shutting themselves up in exclusive groups along Dewey Boulevard or in military reservations has the same effect.

The Filipinos however are patient people. Despite the Congressmen and the "ugly Americans" the alliance is still strong. The Filipinos were taught for years to buy American products and they still do. They were taught to speak English and they are now the third-largest English-speaking country in the world—next after the United Kingdom—with six English-language newspapers, only two in Tagalog and two in Spanish.

The Philippines also have a literacy rate surpassed only by Japan and Taiwan, with a craving for education that sends colleges and night schools sprouting all over Manila. Within a few blocks of ancient university of Santo Tomas, founded in 1611, I saw the more recent East Asian college, the Guzman School of Technology, The Filipino School of Fashion, Far Eastern University, the University of the East, the Polytechnic Institute of the Philippines, and The Far Eastern Technical Institute.

English is the language of instruction in all of them, which caused the correspondent of Moscow's Izestia, while touring the islands, to urge the Filipinos to give up English and go back to their "beautiful Tagalog native language."

Moscow's Best Allies

Izestia's best allies in trying to alienate Filipino affection recently have been Congressman Phil Weaver, Nebraska Republican, and Sen. Steve Young, Ohio Democrat. The former demanded that American bases be moved to Thailand because of "theft, looting, blackmail, extortion and assault" of American personnel — "all winked at or openly approved by perhaps the most corrupt government in the world."

Senator Young in turn announced that he had been forced to pay $25 for a room at the Manila Hotel and warned American tourists to stay away from the Philippines.

I told Filipino newsmen who queried me that Senator Young had a fine record in Congress and undoubtedly had been suffering from a touch of the usual bug that hits Congressmen in the Philippines—"headitis." The Senator from Ohio had checked into the hotel on November 13 with Sens. Frank Moss of Utah and Howard Cannon of Nevada, both Democrats, on an alleged trip of reserve officers. With them were 16 Senate functionaries supposedly putting in their reserve training by a pleasant tour of the Far East at Uncle Sam's expense.

Senator Young occupied Room 530 and his bill, No. 4436, showed that he paid not $25 for his room, but 25 pesos, which is about $12. Moreover, the hotel manager told me that when the Senator paid his bill he wanted to exchange his dollars for pesos at the black market rate which would have made his room about $6. Black marketing is a criminal offense and the hotel manager refused.

So the Senator then warned tourists not to come to Manila. When I told Filipinos that Senator Young has had a good record, they expressed the hope that he would get over his touch of "headitis" soon.

Theft And Poverty

Up at Clark Field, Chief U. S. Air Base in the Philippines, I found there had been theft from both the government and American personnel. But you have to remember that for some years we encouraged the Filipinos to steal from Japanese bases, so stealing from military bases to some has become an accepted profession. On the other hand there have been 27 Filipino shot and killed by U.S. guards during this series of looting, which has made the local population just about as indignant as Congressman Weaver. Because Philippine law does not sanction the killing of a thief.

You also have to remember that when you put wealth alongside of extreme poverty you are bound to have trouble. One shelf of goods in the Clark Field PX would feed a neighboring Filipino family for months. Poverty is such that Filipinos dig foxholes on the Crow Valley bombing range to get scraps of shells after they explode. One man was killed and another had a leg blasted off waiting for the bombs to drop. Yet they sell the scrap for only 57 cents.

When the Filipino who had lost his leg was asked why he had hid on the bombing range at the risk of death for only 37 cents, he replied: "It's better than starving."

Shortly before I visited Clark Field, however, all thievery had stopped. The Philippine government had sent extra members of the Philippine Constabulary plus 12 horses to patrol the 27 miles of fence around Clark Field. This was partly necessary because budget cuts in Washington had eliminated 300 American guards this year.

Despite past theft and some friction, however, American military relations with the Filipinos on the whole are excellent. For the Philippine people have a genuine, deep-rooted affection for Americans which not even visiting Congressmen so far have been able to squelch. (Copyright, 1959, By The Bell Syndicate)

Jim Bishop: Reporter

By Jim Bishop

The Social Register, as an instrument of class, declined and fell into a coma some years ago. It is still alive, and I am certain that people thrill when they are listed in the little Blue Book, but it is no longer an instrument of power in the Snob Set. It has been years since I heard a long-netted mother wail: "But Penelope, you cannot have this man to dinner—he's just a dirty little multi-millionaire."

There is no true blue-blooded society in America today, a society in which blood lines determine whether one is a thoroughbred or a plow horse. Nothing has taken the place of the Blue Book although, about fifteen years ago, Isabel Leighton, editor of The Aspirin Age and author of other books, suggested a Society of Achievement.

Her idea was to dump all the blue-bloods and to draw up a social register in each large city in which achievement would be recognized. This book would list men like Dr. Jonas Salk and Richard Nixon and the top corporation officers and scientists and inventors and grocers, plus women like Pearl Buck and Oveta Culp Hobby and Irene Dunne and Ivy Baker Priest and Edna Ferber and Clara Boothe Luce.

It was such a sound notion that nothing came of it. The nearest thing to it—and it's pretty far behind Miss Leighton's idea—is a new book called Celebrity Register. It costs $26 a copy and if anyone thinks that I shelled out this money solely because my name is in it, he is eminently right.

The authors—Cleveland Amory, a writer with a name like a love-sick city, and Earl Blackwell, founder of Celebrity Service—did the work with Sydney Wolfe Cohen and a group of unemployed rewrite men. The book purports to list those persons who are international celebrities. This, as you might surmise, embraces the whole world.

Still, Celebrity Register lists fewer than 2,500 persons and I am sure that the number should be closer to 50,000, perhaps more. Who's Who in America lists more than 100,000 biographies of people from one country. These, of course, are not all celebrities, but, to even the score, many of those listed in the Celebrity Register would not be found in Who's Who. The new book has an advantage in publishing pictures of those who have found favor with the authors in addition to a breezy little dissertation about each celebrity. Some of those "celebrities"—or perhaps, them celebrities—showed up at a cocktail party given for the authors at Sherman Billingsley's Stork Club.

Where else would one find Igor Cassini talking to Buddy Hackett about golf? Or Eddie Condon and Johnny Mercer asking each other how soon they could depart? Arlene Francis and Martin Gabel sat near the door. Lillian Gish and Mae Murray saw each other at a distance. There was a string ensemble and a stack of books on a table. It is hard to tell which made more noise.

After I got home, I sat looking over the entries in the Celebrity Register ($26) and I'm confused. Clara Bow? I'm her old number one fan but Miss Bow has been ill for many years and is not on the scene. Christine Jorgenson? Holy mackerel, Earl Long is listed, although I think that Lucky Luciano is better known internationally. Jackie Gleason is listed and I can understand this, even though the last time he went to Europe he found that he was unknown.

It is a pretty good sports compendium, loaded with fighters, golfers and tennis stars—plus Mickey Mantle and Al Lopez. I question whether these people are known in Iceland or Iran, or even in England. I can understand the inclusion of Anastas Mikoyan, number two man in the Kremlin, because he can induce shudders from Bayonne to Bombay, but why exclude his boss, Nikita Khrushchev?

Nikita is out and Toots Shor is in, and there is a bright line in that, but I will not write it. The dashing, devil-may-care attitude of the book is exemplified in the first entry—Hank Aaron, a ball player—and the last entry, Vera Zornina, a ballet star whose real name is Brigitta Hartwig. Between those are 2,250 names. If all of them buy a copy, the gross will be $58,500. The book cost $125,000.

It's a great thing to have if one of the legs on the dining room table is short.

Winter's Icy Weather Brings 'Fall' Season

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

Every large northern city has its F (fracture) day. It usually occurs when a combination of weather conditions leaves icy streets, slippery sidewalks, and snowpacked stairs. So many bones are broken that the emergency departments in many hospitals have a waiting line.

Falls are the leading cause of injury, next to motor vehicle accidents. Most of them could be avoided if snow and slush were removed from the outside stairs and from the sidewalks before it is trampled down and frozen into an uneven, slippery mass of ice.

When this occurs the ice is difficult to remove but covering it with gravel, cinders, sand, ashes, or rock salt makes it less hazardous.

Ice covered stairs are not fit for man or beast. This is likely to follow a temperature drop after a thaw, especially when water leaks from a faulty gutter. Many persons have been injured critically when leaving the house and stepping off onto a sheet of ice. Look first and then hold on.

It is unfortunate that shoes do not come equipped with chains but a deeply grooved sole and heel offer considerable protection. Many rubbers and overshoes are made in this way and a special cleat-like device is available to slip over the shoes.

When streets and sidewalks are slippery, walk at a cautious pace, with the legs separated to distribute the weight. Only the agile escape injury after the legs shoot out and the fall is inevitable. Some persons are able to roll over in midair like a cat and land on all fours. Others have the presence of mind to relax and slump to the ground, with the weight divided between hips and shoulders. The chance of injury is minimized in a forward fall by curling up and rolling as though doing a somersault.

The elderly and the disabled never should venture out when there is ice or snow on the ground. It is not worth the risk of a fractured hip, leg, wrist or arm.

Unitas To Moore Passes Break Up Defensive Struggle

Nelson And Sample Pilfer 3 Aerials; N.Y. Gets One TD

By GEORGE BOWEN
Associated Press Sports Writer
BALTIMORE (AP) — Two lightning-bolt passes from quarterback Johnny Unitas to halfback Lenny Moore lifted the Baltimore Colts out of a defensive struggle Sunday and set them up for a 31-16 rout of the New York Giants and their second straight pro football championship.

After the Unitas-Moore combination found the only real holes in the heralded Giants' defense to go ahead 14-9 in the last quarter, the Colts turned three pass interceptions into a pair of touchdowns and a field goal to win going away.

Held To Single TD

The Giants were held to a record-tying three field goals by Pat Summerville until the final minute. They scored their touchdown with 31 seconds left on a 32-yard pass from Chuck Conerly to end Bob Schnelker.

Unitas passed for two touchdowns in all and rolled out for four yards and the winning TD that capped an 86-yard, 10-play drive in the 24-point fourth period. The 26-year-old quarterback, player of the year in the National Football League, now has thrown for touchdowns in 39 consecutive games, including last year's 23-17 sudden-death overtime title victory against the Giants.

Game Statistics

BALTIMORE (AP) — Statistics of Sunday's New York-Baltimore National Football League championship game:

New York	Baltimore
16	31
First Downs	13
118	73
Rushing Yardage	250
Passing Yardage	264
17-38	18-29
Passes	15
Passes Intercepted by	6-37
6-48	Points
0	6
Fumbles Lost	23
0	Yards Penalized
23	30

Ironically, it was Moore whom the Giants double-teamed in last year's playoff only to lose because of a Unitas-Ray Berry passing combination. This time, New York concentrated on Berry, and Moore picked off Johnny's jolts to trigger the victory.

Score On Pass Play

The Colts, favored by 3½ points, scored the first time they had the ball—on a 60-yard pass play from Unitas to Moore—but then were blanked by a crushing Giant line until early in the fourth period.

A 36-yard pass play from Unitas to Moore, who bulled to the New York 12, set up the TD that wiped away a 9-7 New York lead as Unitas felled to his right three plays later.

That touchdown left the Giants' wobbly and perked up the Colts as the 57,557 fans in Memorial Stadium sensed a breakthrough.

Conerly, at 38 playing perhaps his greatest season in his 12th NFL year, then lost two of his next four passes to interceptions.

He lost only four all season long previously. The third Colt interception came on an option pass by halfback Frank Gifford.

Nelson intercepted Pass
Andy Nelson made the first interception of the game on the Giant 30 and returned it 16 yards. Unitas then flipped into the flat to rookie end Jerry Richardson of Wofford for a 12-yard touchdown play, and Johnny Sample really clamped the lid by grabbing another Conerly pass and returning it 42 yards for the third TD of the quarter.

Sample, a late season Colt defender, then snagged his second interception and rolled 34 yards to set up a 25-yard field goal by Steve Myhra.

Held To 73 Yards

The Colts, first repeat champions since the 1954-55 Cleveland Browns, ran for only 73 yards against the Giants' line. But Unitas completed 18 of 29 passes for 264 yards while the Giants completed only 17 of 38 for 250.

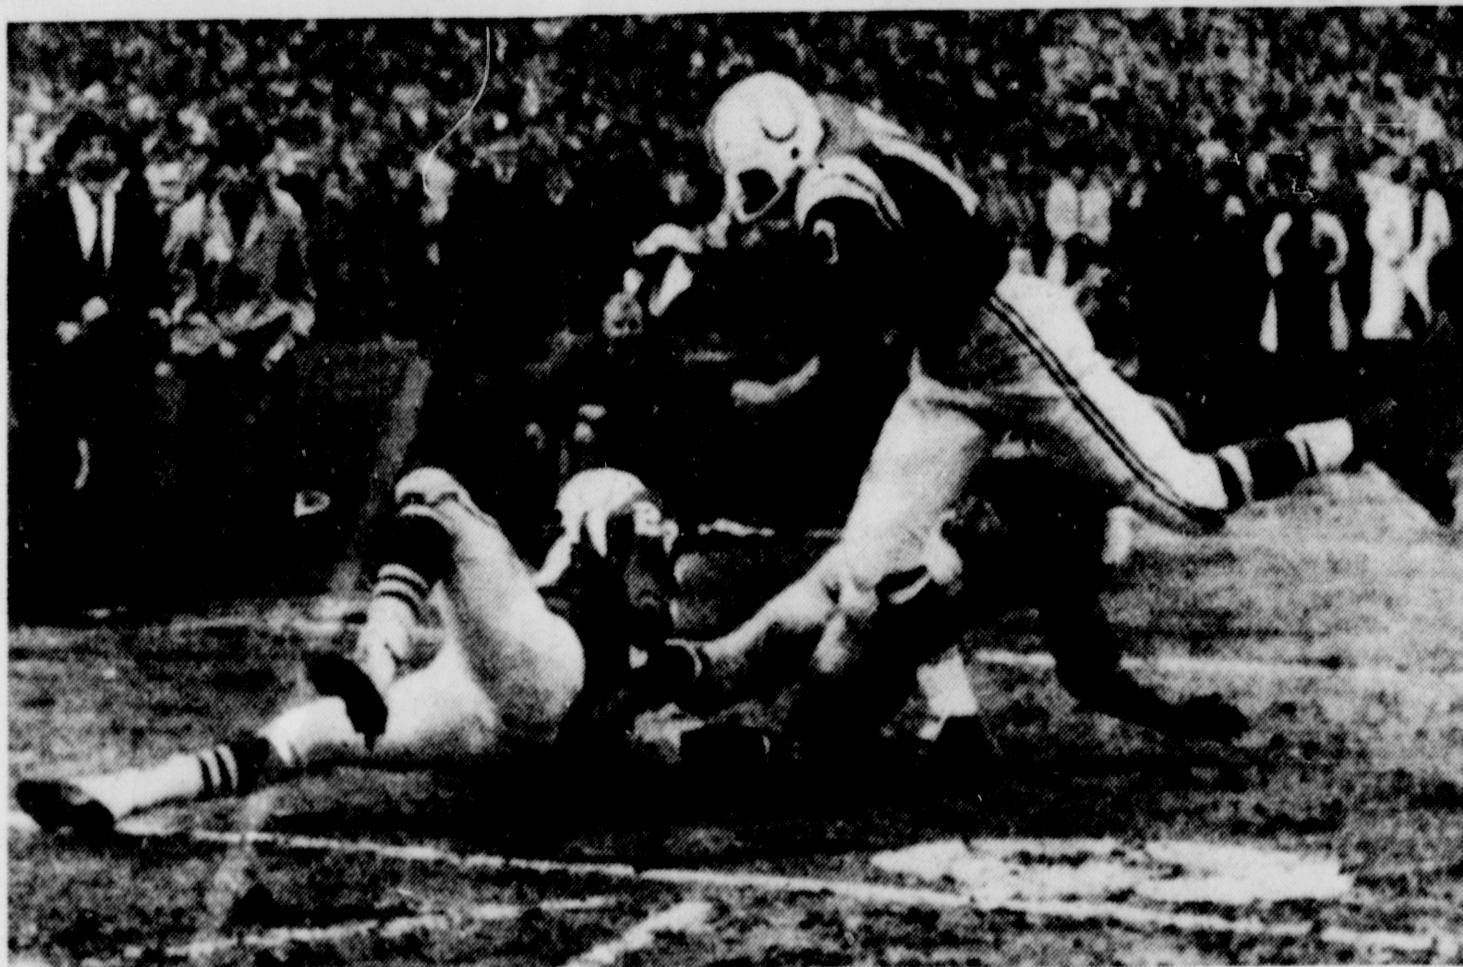

The Giants ran for 118 yards, but missed what could have been their own breakthrough when they gambled and lost on fourth down in the third period.

Conerly and halfback Frank Gifford got together for an 18-yard pass play that carried to the Baltimore 37 for a first down. But after Gifford was held to no gain and Gene (Big Daddy) Lipscomb battered down a Conerly pass, the Baltimore Colts on television Sunday, Baltimore 26 on Conerly's flip to Schnelker.

Halfback Alex Webster slammed into the line as the Giants passed up a field goal try. But the Colts choked off the bid and after an exchange of punts took off on the comeback drive late in the third period.

Unitas completed five passes in the march. Moore wrestled the ball away from Dick Nolan on the decisive 36-yard pass play to the 12.

Substitute fullback Billy Prier drove four yards, end Jim Mutschler caught a five-yard pass

SCORES COLTS SECOND TD—Johnny Unitas, 19, Baltimore Colts quarterback, is in the clear as he scores the Colts' second touchdown in their title game with the New York Giants yesterday at Baltimore. Unitas scored from four yards out. Lenny Moore, left, of the Colts, knocks a New York player to the ground. This was in the third quarter. (AP Photofax)

Art Donovan Says:

"They Shot Mouths Off All Week And We Played Football Today"

Unitas went in standing up past an enraged Giant linebacker Cliff Livingston, lying on the ground from a block by Moore.

Unitas faked the Giants to a standstill on his first touchdown pass on the sixth play for the Colts. At his own 40, he faked a handoff into the line by fullback Alan Ameche, then gave a false alarm passing motion to his left, wheeled and rifled the ball to his right.

Lenny Scores First

Moore was waiting for it at the Giants' 38. He caught the ball behind Lindon Crow and took off with clear sailing for the score with only 4:55 gone in the first quarter.

But the Giants, who had thrust to the Colt 36 with the opening kickoff only to be knocked back to midfield, came bouncing up again. A 28-yard run up the middle on a draw play by fullback Mel Triplett shoved them to the Colt 16 and they fought to the 3. Then the Colt defense, particularly Gino Marchetti and Lipscomb forced them back to the 16 and Summerville kicked a 23-yard field goal.

Myhra tried to equal it at the start of the second period from 42 yards out, but the ball was wide to the left. Later in the period, the Colts were on the 21, needing eight yards for a first down and to the puzzlement of observers tried unsuccessfully to make it instead of letting Myhra kick again.

A 48-yard pass play in which Schnelker stole the ball from Carl Taseff set up Summerville for his second field goal before the half ended, 7-6 in Baltimore's favor. Summerville booted it from 37 yards and the Colts hotly disputed Referee Ron Gibbs' ruling that it was good.

Giants Grab 9-7 Lead

The Giants gained their 9-7 lead midway in the third period after bogging down when they reached the Colt 10 on a 77-yard advance in a dozen plays. Summerville's fourth-down field goal, a 22-yarder, did it and tied a record.

Only three others ever had kicked three field goals in a title game. Jack Manders and Bob Snyder, both playing for the Chicago Bears against the Giants and Cleveland's Lou Groza did it previously.

It was the 11th time the Giants were in the championship playoff and the eighth time they failed.

The Colts, after seven years of their current league franchise, have won both shots at the title. New York 3 3 3 7-16 Baltimore 7 0 0 24-31

New York—TD, Schnelker (32, pass from Conerly), PAT, Summerville, FG, Summerville (3, 23, 37, 22).

Baltimore—TD, Moore (60, pass from Unitas), Unitas (4, run, Richardson (12, pass from Unitas), Sample (42, pass from Unitas), PAT, Myhra (4, FG, Myhra (25).

Syracuse, the nation's No. 1 team, meets Texas in the Cotton Bowl on Friday. The Orangemen held their last hard workout Saturday and took off Sunday.

Second-string fullback Johnny Nichols, who has an infected toe, was the only player to miss Saturday's workout.

Schwartzwalder said the team will work out only once a day on Monday and Tuesday and these drills will be light. The team will fly to Dallas Wednesday morning.

Ewbank Credits 3d Quarter Defensive With Sparking Colts

BALTIMORE (AP)—"They shot their mouths off all week—and we played football today."

That was the sum-up of Baltimore tackle Art Donovan Sunday after the Colts rocked the New York Giants 31-16 for their second straight National Football League championship.

"We're just a better football team, that's all," Donovan added quietly amidst the hilarious ruckus of the Colt dressing room after the Baltimore players and coaches expressed their thanks in prayer.

Beaming head Coach Weeb Ewbank credited a defensive stand in the third period with sparking the Colts. Trailing 9-7 after blowing a 7-0 advantage, they stiffened on their own 26 when the Giants had fourth down and about a foot to go for a first down. Baltimore went on to score 24 points before the Giants threatened again.

Colts Were Fired Up
"I think holding them like that fired us up," said Ewbank. As for a second period decision to snub a field goal try, Ewbank said "I decided to go for the pass play (which missed) because I just had a hunch we were going to hit."

Sometimes you gamble and win, sometimes you gamble and lose. We lost, but fortunately it didn't hurt us too much."

Defensive backs Andy Nelson and Johnny Sample, who snared fourth period interceptions intended for halfback Frank Gifford, explained them matter-of-factly.

Nelson's set up a touchdown and Sample ran 42 yards for a TD with the other.

"I was playing the center of a zone defense and picked up Gifford as he came into my area," said Nelson. "Then I saw the ball heading for me and forgot all about Gifford."

"No, I wasn't afraid he'd get behind me and go all the way," Sample said. "I saw the ball all the way and felt sure I could beat him on it."

Congratulated By Nixon
Quarterback Johnny Unitas patiently but tersely answered newsmen and smiled only when Vice President Nixon congratulated him and asked about a smudge on his cheek.

"It's nothing," grinned Unitas. Then, ignoring his loss of 50 yards by the Giant line in the first half, he added, "they didn't lay a hand on me."

Fans Mangle Allegany High Goal Posts

Steel Bars Come Down After Game

BALTIMORE (AP) — It was a deliciously happy crowd that rushed onto the brown turf of Memorial Stadium as the gun sounded the end of the Giants-Colts title game Sunday.

The highly partisan fans surged toward the goal posts at either end. The goal posts are steel bars a fist's width in diameter.

The first attack on the white bars was stymied. Then the crowd at the south goal gave a tremendous surge, and down came the posts. Within minutes they were twisted, mangled bits of scrap.

Mostly, though, the crowd just milled about, content to revel in the thrill of victory and slap backs of friends and strangers alike.

And some simply were content to stand in front of the scoreboard—a thing of beauty to the home-towners, with the yellow lights showing Baltimore 31, New York 16.

Celtics Cop 15th In Row

Boston Wins Over Royals, 122-111

CINCINNATI, Ohio (UPI)—The Boston Celtics maintained their mastery over Cincinnati, downing the Royals, 122-111 Sunday night, despite a 41-point scoring performance by Cincinnati's Jack Twyman.

It was the 13th consecutive time that Boston has defeated the Royals, and sixth this season. The victory also ran the Celtics' current winning streak to 15 games.

Down 11 points near the end of the second quarter, the Royals moved ahead, 63-60, in the first three minutes of the third period, and hung on for a 64-64 tie on Twyman's hot shooting. The Celtics then jammed in the next nine points while the Royals missed four consecutive lay-up shots, and the battle was over.

Boston widened the gap to 18 points at 92-74 in the opening seconds of the final period before the Royals began hitting again.

Bob Cousy was Boston's top scorer with 25 points.

No Place Like Home Sweet Home For Pitt

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—"Home Sweet Home" would be an appropriate "fight song" for the Pittsburgh Panthers.

The Panthers have been victorious in all their four home games but they lost a similar number away. Their latest defeat was administered Saturday night by Canisius College, 89-82, in Buffalo, N.Y.

Unbeaten West Virginia Plays Stanford Quint Today

Los Angeles Tilt At 6:30 EST

Winner Will Play UCLA-Michigan Victor On Tuesday

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (UPI)—Second-ranked West Virginia University (8-0) clashes with up-set minded Stanford University (2-3) Monday in the second game of the first Los Angeles Basketball Classic.

The Mountaineers, led by co-captains Jerry West and Willie Akers, limbered up for the Indians Sunday with a workout at the new $6,000,000 sports arena, site of the tournament. The Stanford game is scheduled to begin at 6:30 p.m. e.s.t.

WVU will be after its second consecutive holiday tournament. Last week, the Mountaineers edged St. Louis and Kentucky to win the Kentucky Invitational.

West Virginia, if it beats Stanford, will play the UCLA-Michigan winner Tuesday at midnight e.s.t.

Stanford boasts five returning lettermen, headed by 6-foot-8 Neal Brockmeyer and 6-7 Jerry Thuesen. West Virginia's tallest starter is 6-5 Willie Akers.

Want Shot At Bears

The Mountaineers' main aim is to get another shot at NCAA champion California. The Golden Bears edged WVU 71-70 in last year's NCAA finals.

The Bears, led by 6-foot-10 center Darrell Imhoff, have won 22 consecutive games dating back to last season.

The way the tournament pairings are set up, the Bears and West Virginia are in different brackets and are expected to meet in the finals.

California will play a tough Illinois (5-0) team and Southern Cal will meet Northwestern in other first round pairings.

The Mountaineers will take a horse race type of game to the coast that is famed for its teams' slow ball control type game.

The biggest things in the Mountaineers' favor is West and a strong bench. The one thing they lack is a good big man.

In the past, Schaus has used a policy of "eight regulars", five starters and three reserves he can put in the game at any time. This year he has center Joe Posch, forward Paul Miller and guard Butch Goode to insert into the line up as strategy demands.

Wears Face Guard

West, the 6-foot-3 jumping jack, will go into the tournament with a broken nose, covered by a plastic face guard to avoid further injury.

Will this bother the Mountaineer? He says it won't and if it doesn't the Mountaineers may cope the tourney. "If we play like we did in the KIT, we can take it," he said.

A Place In The Sun

Bowie is unique among race tracks in that it faces southeast and the sun shines into the stands during racing hours. The majority of race tracks open to the east but Bowie founders knowing that the "track in the pines" would operate in early spring and late fall had the foresight in building to derive the warmth of the sun.

PROMINENT POPS—First of Nashua's and Swaps' crop of yearlings, these two fillies owned by the Darby Dan Farm will come of racing age January 1 and make their first starts at Hialeah. Nashua's daughter is at left.

East Germany Quits Ski Jump Because Flags Are Banned

BERLIN (AP)—Communist East Germany quit the 1959-60 international ski jumping competition at Garmisch-Partenkirchen and Oberstdorf because the flags of the attending nations will not be flown.

Czechoslovakia and Russia immediately announced they too would not compete in the jumping, a major pre-Olympic test, in support of East Germany's protest.

The West German Ski Assn. decided against flying the flags of the competing nations to avoid hoisting Communist East Germany's new banner.

Hoisting of the East German flag is all but outlawed in West Germany because Bonn authorities believe it will lead to disturbances of public order and safety.

Landry is slated to join Houston.

BALTIMORE (UPI)—Tom Landry, defensive coach with the New York Giants for the past six seasons, has worked his last game for the National Football League club, it was learned Sunday.

The 35-year-old graduate of the University of Texas will take a coaching position with the Houston club of the new American Football League within a week.

Landry is scheduled to meet with a group representing the Houston club this week and the announcement will be made then, Press International.

Army Gridders Excel As North Defeats South

Caldwell Passes Spark 27-17 Win

By United Press International

Army's famed "lonely end" passing combination of Joe Caldwell and Bill Carpenter left cheering when it bowed out of college football in Saturday's North-South game.

The favored North beat the South, 27-17, and there wasn't the slightest bit of doubt among the 35,181 in the Orange Bowl as to which players made the difference.

Completes 12 Passes

Caldwell completed 12 of 38 passes for 17 yards to win the most valuable player award for the North team—and, as usual, his favorite target was the 210-pound Carpenter. Halfback Bob Anderson made it an all-around Army show by winning the "outstanding sportsman" award in the post-game poll of sportswriters.

The Yankees upset the Rebels, 20-8, in the annual Blue - Gray game and the National All-Stars whipped the Southwest All-Stars, 21-6, in the other two all-star exhibition games played Saturday.

Caldwell passed 27 yards to Carpenter for the North's first touchdown and set up the next two scores with passes to Carpenter and Iowa's Curt Metz. The North led, 14-3, at halftime and had a 27-10 lead with a minute to go as it scored its fourth victory in the 12-game series.

End Dan Edgington of Florida, who caught six passes including a seven-yard touchdown pass, was selected the South's outstanding player.

Quarterbacks Jack Lee of Cincinnati and Russ Fichtner of Purdue led a Blue attack that piled up 268 yards rushing, 107 passing and 26 first downs. A Blue line, studded with Big Ten stars, limited the Gray to 64 yards rushing and 101 passing.

Richie Lucas Scores

All-American guard Bill Burrell of Illinois set up one touchdown with an interception and led a tight defense that enabled the National All-Stars to win easily over the Southwest All-Stars.

Quarterback Richie Lucas of Penn State got into offensive action in the fourth period and capped a 47-yard scoring drive by racing eight yards for a touchdown.

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN: I'm 47 and going to meet friends outside your home through the menopause. My husband is the type who thinks this is a lot of bunk. He, however, is constantly under the doctor's care, reads medical books like most people read novels, and has a technical name for every one of his precious aches and pains.

He says menopause is natural and millions of women go through it with no trouble whatever. The "complainers" are only trying to drum up sympathy.

According to him childbirth is a cinch, too. His mother had six with no doctor present—just a midwife. His theory is that physical changes in a woman are a part of nature and were designed by nature to be painless. Modern women who complain are only trying to get attention or sympathy from men.

Will you please set him straight? MERE WOMAN
DEAR MERE WOMAN: Humans vary. Some women have been known to give birth in the back of a sedan, with a sneeze, but most of us sweat it out in the labor room.

The menopause hits certain women hard while others breeze through without so much as a hot flash. Any doctor will tell you that the physical and emotional changes which accompany menopause are genuine and not a conspiracy to get sympathy. Medical science has developed new drugs in the last few years which have proven a Godsend to women who have difficulty.

Since that insensitive clunk you're married to likes to read medical books present him with one on THIS subject. He needs educating.

DEAR ANN: I'm 16 and miserable. The reason—I'm ashamed to invite the kids over or have a fellow pick me up for a date at home because of my grandfather who lives with us.

Gramp is 82 and forgetful. He never can remember where his teeth or his glasses are. He often forgets to put on his pants. Every night he sits in the living room (in his underwear) watching TV. I've complained to Mom but she says older people should have special privileges and respect. I can see her point, but she doesn't see MINE. Do you think it's right for a girl to have to be picked up for dates at a friend's house? What is your opinion?

EMBARRASSED
DEAR EMBARRASSED: I agree that older people should have respect and special privileges, but putting a bathrobe on Gramp does not deny him either. You should not be forced to

DEAR ANN: A good friend of mine has a 7-month-old baby. When she comes to visit for the afternoon, (at my invitation) she puts the baby on the sofa or the bed and places chairs around so he won't fall off.

Almost without fail, there is a damp ring which I notice after they leave. I don't want to say anything to her because she's a sensitive person. I have a solution which removes the ring nicely, but it's a bit of a job.

My husband says to tell her. If you can think of a more genteel way I'd appreciate it.—PHOEBE

DEAR PHOEBE: Buy some rubber sheeting and put it under the baby. This solution is more practical than the solution that comes in a bottle.

Eight Injured As B&O Train Leaves Tracks

Accident Occurs Near Tunnelton

Eight persons were injured, none seriously, early yesterday morning when eight of 14 passenger cars and five diesel units of the B&O's National Limited derailed about three miles west of Tunnelton, W. Va., in Preston County.

The accident tied up two of the three tracks between Newburg and Tunnelton.

R. J. Cannon, superintendent of the Cumberland Division of the B&O, said relief crews from Cumberland and Grafton were expected to have the wreckage cleared up by last midnight.

He said the accident occurred at 2:15 a.m. yesterday and its cause had not been determined. The National Limited was east-bound to Washington and Baltimore, he said. There was no estimate of damage.

Eight Hospitalized
Seven persons were taken to a Kingwood hospital for observation and another to a Grafton hospital for treatment. Mrs. Lou Messick, of Washington, was treated for head lacerations at Grafton and was released.

Held for observation at Preston Memorial Hospital in Kingwood were Virginia Steagala and Gerald Waite, both of Carbondale, Ill.; Mary Vincent and Mrs. Harold Roberts and her three children, Brenda, Patty and Bobby, all of Baltimore.

Freight Is Flagged Down

A possible tragedy was averted when a speeding westbound freight train was flagged down a short distance from the derailment.

The eight cars and diesel units remained coupled but leaned at a 45-degree angle, blocking the two eastbound tracks. The westbound track was not blocked said Mr. Cannon.

The National Limited was en route from St. Louis to Washington. Sixty of the 324 passengers were transferred to another train and continued on to Washington.

Mr. Cannon said there were 228 coach passengers, 59 Pullman passengers and 37 who were in slumber coaches.

Second Wreck On B&O Delays Fast Freight

The derailment of 23 cars of a B&O merchandise train en route from New York to St. Louis yesterday morning had some effect on rail traffic westbound out of Cumberland.

High Car 97, a fast freight which left Cumberland at 7:58 p.m. yesterday, was re-routed through Willard and Newark, Ohio, to Cincinnati.

Normally the train travels by way of Grafton on what is known as the high car route.

In the accident at 6:15 a.m. the cars derailed on a straight stretch of track five miles west of Sistersville, on the Ohio River. There were no injuries among the crew.

The wreck closed the single track between New Martinsville and Parkersburg. The B&O said that as a result, trains as far east as Cumberland were being re-routed and locals were being held up.

It was not expected the track would be opened before noon today. The cause of the derailment was undetermined.

Vandalism Cases Reported Here

Two cases of vandalism were reported to city police in the past several days.

John J. Laughlin, 338 Mt. View Drive, said someone helped him drive a large spruce tree which had been growing in front of his house.

Sometime on the evening of December 23 the tree was cut down and carried away, he said.

Christ Charuhas reported that someone threw a glass jar into a large pane of glass at the Nu-Way Shoe Shop, 62 North Mechanic Street, sometime after 6 p.m. December 22.

Emine's husband. Standing are four children of Mr. and Mrs. Gilpin. Mr. Gilpin will return to the United States next June.

Income Tax Forms To Be Put In Mail

Beginning this week, over 1,500,000 individual taxpayers in the Baltimore District, which includes Cumberland, will receive one of the three 1959 federal income tax forms and instructions which the Internal Revenue Service says it has designed to simplify their annual filing chore as much as possible.

Irving Machiz, district director, said the form each taxpayer will get through the mail is the one that appears to come closest to his needs, based on what he reported last year.

Mr. Machiz said each of the three forms is designed for a different set of facts, including the size and source of income and whether the taxpayer plans to take the standard deduction or to itemize his deductions.

The vast majority of taxpayers, he said, will find the form they get in the mail will fit their 1959 reporting requirements because their tax situation will not have changed materially since last year.

Taxpayers whose 1959 tax situation has changed from the previous year, he said, will find one of the two other forms will meet their new filing requirements. These forms will be available after January 1 at the local IRS offices or at most Post Offices and banks.

Form 1040A, the simple punch-card form, will be mailed to all most 450,000 taxpayers; Form 1040W (for wages) is a new two-page form that will be mailed to about 500,000 taxpayers, and Form 1040, once used by most taxpayers, will be sent to fewer than one-third of Internal Revenue's mailing list, or to about 550,000 taxpayers.

Prisoner Admitted To Hospital Here

Roy L. VanMeter, 18 South Mechanic Street, was arrested late Saturday night by City Police, who charged him with a motor vehicle violation. He will be taken to the state's attorney's office for questioning, authorities said.

Bond was set at $1,000, according to police who said the man was arrested in South Cumberland about 11:50 p.m. After being jailed, police said, Van Meter complained of being ill and was taken to Memorial Hospital at 3:45 a.m. His condition last night was reported "satisfactory."

He was arrested by Officers Murl Boggs and Donald Davis.

Children On Holiday Urged To Read Books

While children are enjoying a school holiday all this week, Miss Mary G. Walsh, librarian of the Cumberland Free Public Library, reminds them that they could well spend their free time by reading some of the new and interesting books at the library.

Miss Elizabeth Cain, assistant to the librarian, has prepared brief biographies on a number of these new books. She reports that Thomas B. Costain, one of the most popular contemporary authors, has added another exciting novel to his long list of best sellers. "The Darkness and the Dawn" is the story of Attila the Hun and his menacing threat to Rome. This novel is considered by many to be the author's best.

"Orde Wingate" by Christopher Sykes is one of the most vivid military biographies to have been written in recent years. Here is the fascinating story of an eccentric British general and his leadership of guerrilla forces during World War II.

One of the most colorful biographies available at the library is "Paddlewheel Pirate" by Gordon Newell. This is the story of the life and adventures of Ned Wakeman, clipper-ship captain, steamship commander, smuggler and pirate. She calls it "authentic America at its very best."

For those who are interested in Civil War history, the library recommends "The Photographic History of the Civil War." This five-volume set, complete and unabridged, contains several thousand pages of pictures and text which includes the largest collection of Brady photographs in the world. Henry Steele Commager's introduction is new and instructive.

"The Thirteenth Apostle" by Eugene Vale is the unusual story of a man who, while searching for a missing American on a dangerous mountain, discovers his own soul. This mature novel has been called "a magnificent allegory."

Once again, the veteran novelist Frances Parkinson Keyes has added another novel to her long list of successes. "Station Wagon In Spain" is a charming story of a wealthy young professor and his adventures while visiting in Spain.

Many Christmas books at the library are in considerable demand. They include "The Christmas Annual 1959," "Christmas With Ed Sullivan," "Merry Christmas and Happy New Year," sparkling new verse by Phyllis McGinley, and "The Christmas Story" retold by many authors, edited by Anne Fremantle.

Local Man Finds Turkey Land Of Many Contrasts

By ALBERT D. DARBY

A word picture of Turkey as a land of contrasts between the old and the new has been sent back here by Curtis O. Gilpin, Fort Hill High School algebra teacher, who is now midway through a year as an exchange teacher at Samsun, Turkey.

Mercury Hits 64 In Cumberland

Yesterday was rather balmy for December as the temperature rose to about 64 degrees in Cumberland.

Considerable cloudiness, warm and rather windy with showers is forecast for today. The temperature is expected to range from 57 to 66 degrees.

The U.S. weather station in Charleston, W. Va., said yesterday's high of 71 degrees in the West Virginia capital city broke by one degree the previous record for the day, set in 1904.

Traffic Tied Up By Collision

Traffic along U.S. Route 40 in the Narrows was tied up for nearly 40 minutes yesterday evening following a two-car collision which caused considerable property damage.

Trooper George Robinette said a car operated by Miss Sue Ann Swanner, 16, Cresaptown, failed to negotiate a slight curve, struck the guard rail and then jackknifed across the highway, hitting another vehicle.

Trooper Robinette said Miss Swanner's car was traveling west and struck the car operated by Mrs. Estella Struntz, LaVale, which was headed east on Route 40.

Considerable property damage was caused to the Swanner vehicle, while damage to the other auto was minor, Trooper Robinette said. No one in either vehicle was injured.

The accident occurred about 5:20 p.m. and traffic was delayed about 40 minutes.

Unemployment Checks To Be Distributed

All eligible claimants for unemployment insurance who would normally receive their benefit checks Friday will receive them Thursday this week, as will all claimants regularly scheduled for payment Thursday, according to the Maryland Department of Employment Security.

The local office of employment security will be closed New Year's Day.

Sybert Chides Baltimore For Ober Act Stand

BALTIMORE (AP)—The Baltimore stand on enforcing the Ober Act has brought a rebuttal from State Attorney General C. Ferdinand Sybert.

Sybert charged the city Saturday with not holding to its agreement to support the subversive act.

"We are chagrined that Baltimore is backing out of its understanding for enforcement of the act," he said. "After all, most of the work is in Baltimore City."

City Budget Director Charles L. Benton told the state that because only $6,000 is tabbed for investigators in the new budget, Baltimore could pay only the salary of one investigator. The full annual salary of one investigator is $6,000.

Though the Ober Act generally has been handled in federal courts since a Supreme Court ruling in 1956, investigators here check teachers, police, civil defense personnel and other persons for subversive activities.

Former Local Pastor Dies

Rev. Dr. Martin Luther Enders, 81, former pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church here and pastor emeritus of First English Lutheran Church, Baltimore, died Saturday at his home, 4303 North Charles Street, Baltimore.

Dr. Enders served as pastor of the local church from 1910 to 1925 and was pastor of the Baltimore church from 1925 until 1953. He also had served as pastor of Salem Lutheran Church in Catonsville from 1901 to 1910.

He was born in Richmond, Ind., and was graduated from Gettysburg (Pa.) College in 1892, and from Lutheran Theological Seminary in Gettysburg in 1902.

Dr. Enders is survived by his widow, Mrs. Grace (Hubner) Enders; two daughters, Mrs. Grace LeRoy, Mineola, N.Y., and Mrs. Jere M. H. Willis, Fredericksburg, Va.; and two sons, Martin L. Enders Jr., Baltimore, and John G. Enders, Westfield, N.J.

Services will be conducted Wednesday at 2 p.m. at First English Lutheran Church and burial will be in Prospect Hill Cemetery, York, Pa.

Wins National Contest

Mrs. Jessie White, 73-year-old widow who lives at 113 North Centre Street and has been confined to a wheel chair since she broke her hip, wrist and ankle in a fall in August 1957, is presented a check by William McVey of Christian Herald magazine, representing a prize Mrs. White won by selling more subscriptions to the magazine than anyone else in the nation. Mrs. White is a titling member of First Presbyterian Church and belongs to the church's Women's Association, to the Order of the Eastern Star, and to the YMCA Women's Auxiliary.

Marine Killed In Crash South Of Breezewood

Gary J. Ranchel, 19, Dies In Hospital

A 19-year-old Marine from Lima, Ohio, was killed yesterday morning when an old model auto in which he was riding collided headon with a tractor-trailer on Route 126 south of Breezewood, Pa.

Three other Marines who were passengers in the car were admitted to Bedford County Memorial Hospital.

Dead is Gary J. Ranchel, who died in the hospital. David R. Deyarmon, 18, of East Liverpool, who was seriously injured, was reported in "serious" condition last night at the hospital. Attaches said he sustained internal injuries.

Also injured were Irwin E. Carnes, 18, of North Jackson and Ronald Stergerwalt, 21, of Wadsworth, Ohio, both of whom were reported in "satisfactory" condition last night.

Pennsylvania State Police said they were unable to determine who was driving the car but said it apparently tried to pass another traveling in the same direction on the wet highway, and plowed into the tractor-trailer.

The Marines' 1948 model car was demolished, according to police, who said the accident occurred at 9:45 a.m. Arthur J. Brown, 28, of Portsmouth, Va., driver of the tractor-trailer was not hurt, police said.

It was believed the Marines were returning to their base at Camp Lejeune, N. C. after spending the Christmas holiday at home on leave.

Two Killed In Collision On Turnpike

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa. (UPI)—Two persons were killed and five others were hospitalized Sunday night in a cross-over accident on the Pennsylvania Turnpike near the Allegheny Valley Interchange.

The dead were Mrs. Eleanor Keilman, 26, of Bower Ave., Oaks, Pa., in Montgomery County and Andrew F. Sank, 44, of 2001 Green Road, Cleveland, Ohio. Mrs. Keilman was pronounced dead on arrival here at Citizens General Hospital. Sank died at the scene.

Mrs. Keilman's husband, Jack, 28, was reported in very critical condition. The couple's young daughter and son were detained, but their injuries were not believed serious.

Also detained were the driver of the second car, Waldo P. Sank, 50, Cleveland, and Mrs. Anne Sank, 43, presumably the wife of Andrew.

State police said a car operated by Mrs. Keilman apparently went out of control after striking the medial strip. It crossed into the westbound lane and was hit broadside by the Sank machine.

Baltimore Pike Firemen To Meet

The Baltimore Pike Volunteer Fire Company will hold its regular meeting tonight at 7:30 at the fire hall.

Officers of the company asked that all members attend, because plans will be made for the company's New Year's Eve dance, which will be held at the fire hall from 10 p.m. to 2 a.m., with music by the Tri-ettes.

Other important business will be discussed at tonight's meeting, and refreshments will be served afterwards.

SFC. BRADBURN

Bradburn Leads Army Reserve MP Training Class

Sergeant First Class John E. Bradburn of Company B, 33rd Military Police Battalion at London, Ohio, has graduated first in his class of 26 men at a six-week advanced military police training course at Fort Gordon, Ga.

The course covered traffic control, chemical-bacteriological and radiological warfare, jurisdiction, tactics, prisoner control and map reading.

In civilian life, Sfc. Bradburn is a road inspector with the State Roads Commission. He also serves as operations sergeant of his Army Reserve unit, which is commanded by Captain Leslie J. Clark.

Aliens Must Report Their Addresses

Aliens are reminded that they must report their addresses to the U.S. Government during January in compliance with the law, according to the Department of Justice.

Address report forms will be available at the Cumberland Post Office January 1 for anyone residing in this area who is an alien.

Willful violation of the alien address law can bring a fine of up to $200, a jail sentence and deportation. Address forms should be filed out during January and returned to the Post Office. No non-citizen should mail his card, but should return it to a clerk at the Post Office.

The only non-citizens exempt from the address report requirement are persons in diplomatic status, foreign representatives in the United Nations and Mexican contract laborers.

Any non-citizen outside the country during January is required to file the report within 10 days of his return.

Ceremony Set At Housing Site

The Housing Authority of the City of Cumberland will hold groundbreaking ceremonies next week for its new low-rent housing project located along West Oldtown Road.

The ceremonies will be held Tuesday, January 5 at 2:30 p.m. at the corner of Oldtown Road and Virginia Avenue for the authority's third low-rent housing project.

The housing units are being built by the George Construction Company which began work on the foundations several weeks ago.

The project will consist of 12 buildings which will house 89 units. Cost of the work is $975,375.

The construction company said it will continue to work on the new project as long as the weather permits.

Guard Spends Quiet Holiday In Garrett Jail

Relatives Visit On Saturday

Ronald William "Pete" Guard, 52-year-old former constable in the Friendsville area of Garrett County, observed a quiet Christmas in the Garrett County Jail, where he is being confined awaiting transfer to the Maryland Penitentiary to serve the remainder of a 10-year sentence for manslaughter.

Guard was convicted of manslaughter last Tuesday by the three judges of the Fourth Judicial Circuit, sitting in Garrett County Circuit Court at Oakland. Chief Judge Morgan C. Harris of Cumberland and Associate Judges Neil C. Fraley of Oakland and D. K. McLaughlin of Hagerstown found the former constable guilty of manslaughter in the fatal shooting of George Raymond Schroyer, 40-year-old Friendsville tavern owner, shortly after midnight October 24.

No Holiday Visitors
Garrett County Sheriff James E. Frantz said last night that Guard was allowed no visitors on Christmas Day because it is customary to allow no visitors on holidays. The sheriff operates the jail alone on holidays.

However, on Saturday Guard's wife, several children and six or eight other relatives called on the former constable, who last week was found not guilty of first or second degree murder but received the stiffest possible penalty for manslaughter.

Sheriff Frantz said that plans now call for Guard to be transported to the Maryland Penitentiary in Baltimore about Wednesday. Judge McLaughlin, who passed sentence upon Guard, said at the time that his 10 years are to begin from October 25, when the man was first lodged in the Garrett County Jail.

Testimony in Guard's trial was given last Monday by 18 persons, 10 of whom, including the defendant, were in front of Schroyer's tavern the night he was killed.

There was some conflict in testimony as to whether Guard first struck Ray Coddington, 23, of Friendsville, with his gun and then fired at Schroyer or whether the reverse was true.

Five Agree
Five witnesses called by State's Attorney W. Dwight Stover and Walter W. Dawson, his special assistant for the case, testified that they saw the shot before Coddington, who was wrestling with Schroyer at the time, was struck on the head with Guard's gun.

Included were Clifford Schroyer, 18, and Dale Schroyer, 15, both sons of the deceased; Mrs. Myrtle Schroyer, 62, mother of the deceased; Walter Lee Coddington, 17, also of Friendsville, and Robert Spear, 36, Mrs. Myrtle Coddington's next-door neighbor.

Ray Coddington, also called by the state, recalled seeing the revolver fired but had no recollection of how or when he was struck on the head.

On the other hand, two defense witnesses said Guard first struck Coddington with the gun before it was discharged. They were Thomas Schroyer, 19, now of Falls Church, Va., and Douglas Schroyer, 24, now of Cleveland, Ohio.

They said the blow to Ray Coddington's head preceded the shooting of George Schroyer. Thomas was a distant cousin and Douglas a first cousin of the deceased.

In his own testimony, Guard himself said that he had no intention of shooting Schroyer. He said he struck Coddington, who was on top of Schroyer, with the barrel of his gun and it accidentally discharged, killing the tavern owner.

W. Earle Cobey of Cumberland, Lewis R. Jones of Oakland and E. Ray Jones of Oakland, the three defense attorneys, have been considering the possibility of taking an appeal to the Maryland Court of Appeals but no decision has been announced.

City Firemen Get Two Calls

City firemen were called out twice yesterday afternoon.

At 3:14 p.m. firemen from East Side station went to the home of E. W. Williams, 235 Glenn Street, when food in the oven of the kitchen stove became overheated. The food was damaged, according to firemen who used an extinguisher.

West Side firemen got a rather unusual call at 2:50 p.m. when Box 123 at the corner of Greene and Fayette streets was pulled. They said the water hose on a car had burst and when the water hit the hot engine, steam developed and the driver thought the motor was on fire.

Sunday Church Notices Due Tomorrow

Church notices for services of Sunday, January 3, must be delivered to the Times-News office by 11 p.m. tomorrow, Tuesday, to insure publication.

Because of the holiday publishing schedule, no exceptions can be made.

Eight Injured As B&O Train Leaves Tracks

Accident Occurs Near Tunnelton

Eight persons were injured, none seriously, early yesterday morning when eight of 14 passenger cars and five diesel units of the B&O's National Limited derailed about three miles west of Tunnelton, W. Va., in Preston County.

The accident tied up two of the three tracks between Newburg and Tunnelton.

R. J. Cannon, superintendent of the Cumberland Division of the B&O, said relief crews from Cumberland and Grafton were expected to have the wreckage cleared up by last midnight.

He said the accident occurred at 2:15 a.m. yesterday and its cause had not been determined. The National Limited was east-bound to Washington and Baltimore, he said. There was no estimate of damage.

Eight Hospitalized

Seven persons were taken to a Kingwood hospital for observation and another to a Grafton hospital for treatment. Mrs. Lou Messick, of Washington, was treated for head lacerations at Grafton and was released.

Held for observation at Preston Memorial Hospital in Kingwood were Virginia Steagala and Gerald Waite, both of Carbondale, Ill.; Mary Vincent and Mrs. Harold Roberts and her three children, Brenda, Patty and Bobby, all of Baltimore.

Freight Is Flashed Down

A possible tragedy was averted when a speeding westbound freight train was flagged down a short distance from the derailment.

The eight cars and diesel units remained coupled but leaned at a 45-degree angle, blocking the two eastbound tracks. The westbound track was not blocked said Mr. Cannon.

The National Limited was en route from St. Louis to Washington. Sixty of the 324 passengers were transferred to another train and continued on to Washington.

Mr. Cannon said there were 23 coach passengers, 59 Pullman passengers and 37 who were in slumber coaches.

Second Wreck On B&O Delays Fast Freight

The derailment of 23 cars of a B&O merchandise train en route from New York to St. Louis yesterday morning had some effect on rail traffic westbound out of Cumberland.

High Car 97, a fast freight which left Cumberland at 7:58 p.m. yesterday, was re-routed through Willard and Newark, Ohio, to Cincinnati.

Normally the train travels by way of Grafton on what is known as the high car route.

In the accident at 6:15 a.m. the cars derailed on a straight stretch of track five miles east of Sistersville, on the Ohio River. There were no injuries among the crew.

The wreck closed the single track between New Martinsville and Parkersburg. The B&O said that as a result, trains as far east as Cumberland were being re-routed and locals were being held up.

It was not expected the track would be opened before noon today. The cause of the derailment was undetermined.

Vandalism Cases Reported Here

Two cases of vandalism were reported to city police in the past several days.

John J. Laughlin, 338 Mt. View Drive, said someone helped himself to a large spruce tree which had been growing in front of his house.

Sometime on the evening of December 23 the tree was cut down and carried away, he said.

Christ Charuhas reported that someone threw a glass jar into a large pane of glass at the Nu-Way Shoe Shop, 62 North Mechanic Street, sometime after 6 p.m. December 22.

Births

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Walter, Pasadena (Md.), announce the birth of a son yesterday morning at St. Agnes Hospital in Baltimore. The mother is the former Miss Bonnie Franklin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Franklin, 832 Greene Street.

Memorial Hospital
Mr. and Mrs. D. Patrick Kelly, 550 Fairview Avenue, a daughter yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Kesler, Paw Paw, W.Va., a son Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Walsh, Cresaptown, a son Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Marlin M. Stutzman, 81 Trost Avenue, a daughter Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Merrill, 532 Maryland Avenue, a daughter Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Shippe, 22 Bellevue Street, a daughter Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold D. Valentin, 445 North Centre Street, a son Friday.

Traveling Teacher's Hosts

Emine's husband. Standing are four children of Mr. and Mrs. Kemal Sezen. They are, left to right, Turgut, Duygu, Ulbin Unar, a married daughter, and Unsul. Mr. Gilpin will return to the United States next June.

Income Tax Forms To Be Put In Mail

Beginning this week, over 1,500,000 individual taxpayers in the Baltimore District, which includes Cumberland, will receive one of the three 1959 federal income tax forms and instructions which the Internal Revenue Service says it has designed to simplify their annual filing chore as much as possible.

Irving Machiz, district director, said the form each taxpayer will get through the mail is the one that appears to come closest to his needs, based on what he reported last year.

Mr. Machiz said each of the three forms is designed for a different set of facts, including the size and source of income and whether the taxpayer plans to take the standard deduction or to itemize his deductions.

The vast majority of taxpayers, he said, will find the form they get in the mail will fit their 1959 reporting requirements because their tax situation will not have changed materially since last year.

Taxpayers whose 1959 tax situation has changed from the previous year, he said, will find one of the two other forms will meet their new filing requirements. These forms will be available after January 1 at the local IRS offices or at most Post Offices and banks.

Form 1040A, the simple punch-card form, will be mailed to almost 450,000 taxpayers; Form 1040W (for wages) is a new two-page form that will be mailed to another 500,000 taxpayers; and Form 1040, once used by most taxpayers, will be sent to fewer than one-third of Internal Revenue's mailing list, or to about 550,000 taxpayers.

Prisoner Admitted To Hospital Here

Roy L. VanMeter, 18 South Mechanic Street, was arrested late Saturday night by City Police, who charged him with a motor vehicle violation. He will be taken to the state's attorney's office for questioning, authorities said.

Bond was set at $1,000, according to police who said the man was arrested in South Cumberland about 11:50 p.m. After being jailed, police said, VanMeter complained of being ill and was taken to Memorial Hospital at 3:45 a.m. His condition last night was reported "satisfactory."

He was arrested by Officers Murl Boggs and Donald Davis.

Children On Holiday Urged To Read Books

While children are enjoying a school holiday all this week, Miss Mary G. Walsh, librarian of the Cumberland Free Public Library, reminds them that they could well spend their free time by reading some of the new and interesting books at the library.

Miss Elizabeth Cain, assistant to the librarian, has prepared brief biographies on a number of these new books. She reports that Thomas B. Costain, one of the most popular contemporary authors, has added another exciting novel to his long list of best sellers. "The Darkness and The Dawn" is the story of Attila the Hun and his menacing threat to Rome. This novel is considered by many to be the author's best.

"Orde Wingate" by Christopher Sykes is one of the most vivid military biographies of his leadership in recent years. An exciting and fascinating story of the life of a British general and his leadership of guerrilla forces during World War II.

One of the most colorful biographies available at the library is "Paddlewheel Pirate" by Gordon Newell. This is the story of the life and adventures of Ned Wakeman, clipper-ship captain, steamship commander, smuggler and pirate. She calls it "authentic America at its very best."

Local Man Finds Turkey Land Of Many Contrasts

By ALBERT D. DARBY
News Staff Writer

A word picture of Turkey as a land of contrasts between the old and the new has been sent back here by Curtis O. Gilpin, Fort Hill High School algebra teacher, who is now midway through a year as an exchange teacher at Samsun, Turkey.

Mercury Hits 64 In Cumberland

Yesterday was rather balmy for December as the temperature rose to about 64 degrees in Cumberland.

Considerable cloudiness, warm and rather windy with showers is forecast for today. The temperature is expected to range from 57 to 66 degrees.

The U.S. weather station in Charleston, W. Va., said yesterday's high of 71 degrees in the West Virginia capital city broke by one degree the previous record for the day, set in 1904.

Traffic Tied Up By Collision

Traffic along U.S. Route 40 in the Narrows was tied up for nearly 40 minutes yesterday evening following a two-car collision which caused considerable property damage.

Trooper George Robinette said a car operated by Miss Sue Ann Swarner, 16, Cresaptown, failed to negotiate a slight curve, struck the guard rail and then jackknifed across the highway, hitting another vehicle.

Trooper Robinette said Miss Swarner's car was traveling west and struck the car operated by Mrs. Estella Struntz, LaVale, which was headed east on Route 40.

Considerable property damage was caused to the Swarner vehicle, while damage to the other auto was minor. Trooper Robinette said no one in either vehicle was injured.

The accident occurred about 5:20 p.m. and traffic was delayed about 40 minutes.

Unemployment Checks To Be Distributed

All eligible claimants for unemployment insurance who would normally receive their benefit checks Friday will receive them Thursday this week, as will all claimants regularly scheduled for payment Thursday, according to the Maryland Department of Employment Security.

The local office of employment security will be closed New Year's Day.

Mr. Gilpin has written a number of lengthy letters to his mother, Mrs. Helen A. Gilpin, Bedford Road, and has tried to paint a clear picture of life in Turkey and some of his experiences there. Last June he was awarded a U.S. education exchange grant from the State Department under the Fulbright Act for a year of teaching in Turkey. He arrived at Samsun, which is situated along the Black Sea, about September 1.

After his nine months in Turkey, he will return to this country during the first week of June in a matter of only six hours. That's the length of time from Istanbul to this country via jet airliner.

One of Mr. Gilpin's statements about the pro-American Turks which seems quite revealing is contained in a letter which he sent in mid-October to his fellow faculty members at Fort Hill.

"The Turkish people are more than just a race of people eager to learn the ways of the Western world; they are also very interested in the people of the West learning about them, the Turks," the traveling teacher wrote to Fort Hill.

Volunteer Guide
"They go out of their way to be helpful—almost to the 'worriesome' stage." Then he explained how a group of Turks, who could not speak English, and he, who knew little Turkish, managed to communicate. They knew he wanted to visit the St. Sophia Mosque. As a result, one of the group became a self-appointed guide, accompanied to the mosque by bus, paid the fare and refused to accept any compensation when they returned to their starting point.

Mr. Gilpin's reference to the contrasts in Turkey was contained in a letter to his mother in which he explains his trip by plane to Ankara for a holiday.

This contrast was most apparent at the airport as he was waiting for his plane, as he explained below:

"There were ox-carts moving along the side of the runway; there were women sitting outside the terminal dressed in the usual yasmak over their faces, and their shawls wrapped closely around their heads. The squeal of the oilless wheels of wood was a great contrast to the roar of the motors when the plane came into sight. When the plane landed and belched forth the load of passengers it contained, there was another contrast to be seen. Several of the women were dressed in the latest fashions, and they were greeted by the women wrapped up so tightly."

"Out Of This World"
Another bit of colorful description concerns the teacher's visit to the Mosque of St. Sophia and the Blue Mosque. While there he also visited the Sultan's palace. One room had 50,000 dishes in it that were "out of this world," he wrote.

"There were teacups that were encrusted with diamonds and rubies, an emerald as big as my fist, tassels studded with diamonds that were placed around the necks of camels—the guide said it is impossible to place a value on the jewels in the palace as there are so many that there is not enough money in the world to buy them."

St. Sophia Mosque, he wrote, was completed in the year 546 A.D. The ceiling is covered with gold.

While in Samsun, Mr. Gilpin is staying with the family of Kemal Sezen. He writes that he has been taken in as one of the family and was greatly missed during a brief holiday visit to Ankara.

To Honor Ladies
The Cumberland Lions Club will observe "Ladies Day" at its weekly luncheon meeting Wednesday at 12:15 p.m. at Central YMCA.

No Holiday Visitors

Garrett County Sheriff James E. Frantz said last night that Guard was allowed no visitors on Christmas Day because it is customary to allow no visitors on holidays. The sheriff operates the jail alone on holidays.

However, on Saturday, Guard's wife, several children and six or eight other relatives called on the former constable, who last week was found not guilty of first or second degree murder but received the stiffest possible penalty for manslaughter.

Sheriff Frantz said that plans now call for Guard to be transported to the Maryland Penitentiary in Baltimore about Wednesday, Judge McLaughlin, who passed sentence upon Guard, said at the time that his 10 years are to begin from October 25, when the man was first lodged in the Garrett County Jail.

Testimony in Guard's trial was given last Monday by 18 persons, 10 of whom, including the defendant, were in front of Schroyer's tavern the night he was killed.

There was some conflict in testimony as to whether Guard first struck Ray Coddington, 23, of Friendsville, with his gun and then fired at Schroyer or whether the reverse was true.

Five Agree

Five witnesses called by State's Attorney W. Dwight Stover and Walter W. Dawson, his special assistant for the case, testified that they saw the shot before Coddington, who was wrestling with Schroyer at the time, was struck on the head with Guard's gun. Included were Clifford Schroyer, 18, and Dale Schroyer, 15, both sons of the deceased; Mrs. Myrtle Schroyer, 62, mother of the deceased; Walter Lee Coddington, 17, also of Friendsville, and Robert Spear, 36, Mrs. Myrtle Coddington's next-door neighbor.

Ray Coddington, also called by the state, recalled seeing the revolver fired but had no recollection of how or when he was struck on the head.

On the other hand, two defense witnesses said Guard first struck Coddington with the gun before it was discharged. They were Thomas Schroyer, 19, now of Falls Church, Va., and Douglas Schroyer, 24, now of Cleveland, Ohio. They said the blow to Ray Coddington's head preceded the shooting of a George Schroyer. Thomas was a distant cousin and Douglas a first cousin of the deceased.

In his own testimony, Guard himself said that he had no intention of shooting Schroyer. He said he struck Coddington, who was on top of Schroyer, with the barrel of his gun and it accidentally discharged, killing the tavern owner.

W. Earle Cobey of Cumberland, Lewis R. Jones of Oakland and E. Ray Jones of Oakland, the three defense attorneys, have been considering the possibility of taking an appeal to the Maryland Court of Appeals but no decision has been announced.

City Firemen Get Two Calls
City firemen were called out twice yesterday afternoon. At 3:14 p.m. firemen from East Side station went to the home of E. W. Williams, 233 Glenn Street, when food in the oven of the kitchen stove became overheated. The food was damaged, according to firemen who used an extinguisher.

West Side firemen got a rather unusual call at 2:50 p.m. when Box 123 at the corner of Greene and Fayette streets was pulled. They said the water hose on a car had burst and when the water hit the hot engine, steam developed and the driver thought the motor was on fire.

Sunday Church Notices Due Tomorrow

Church notices for services of Sunday, January 3, must be delivered to the Times-News office by 11 p.m. tomorrow, Tuesday, to insure publication.

Because of the holiday publishing schedule, no exceptions can be made.

Sybert Chides Baltimore For Ober Act Stand

BALTIMORE (AP)—The Baltimore stand on enforcing the Ober Act has brought a rebuttal from State Attorney General C. Ferdinand Sybert.

Sybert charged the city Saturday with not holding to its agreement to support the subversive activities act.

"We are chagrined that Baltimore is backing out of its understanding for enforcement of the act," he said. "After all, most of the work is in Baltimore City."

City Budget Director Charles L. Benton told the state that because only $6,000 is tabbed for investigators in the new budget, Baltimore could pay only the salary of one investigator.

Though the Ober Act generally has been handled in federal courts since a Supreme Court ruling in 1956, investigators here check teachers, police, civil defense personnel and other persons for subversive activities.
